TAPS 1985
Clemson University
Clemson, South Carolina
Volume 75

Paul Simpson

Through seventy-five editions, TAPS has chronicled the activities, changes, and controversies of the University. During these years, Clemson has grown from a small land-grant college to a leading University with much potential.

Clemson—both town and school—continues to evolve. Anticipation of declining patronage due to increases in the drinking age led to the metamorphosis of bars to restaurants. Cope Hall became a women's dorm, Village Green went condo, and Calhoun Courts was expanded.

Those activities which pertain to students may well define student life. However, this definition is as broad as the concept itself. This section is devoted to the social, non-academic activities in which students indulge "after hours." Although not everybody's individual interests can be covered, we have tried to include a vast array of varied views and events. This year the Greek activities were placed in their perspective section, as to not make inclusive this exclusive subject—in laymen's terms, not everyone is a Greek. The regulars, such as Homecoming, Speakers, and Concerts, are included. Also included are many changes which Clemson has undergone this past academic year. There are more opportunities for housing, fewer opportunities for students under the age of twenty. Students are expanding their musical horizons with the emergence of many local bands. Also, there is a well-deserved salute to the University Chorus. Downtown is, as always, under constant reconstruction. No one can cope with the void left by the closing to the Study Hall—admit it, you have craved a Study Hall burger at least once this past year. Students are passing idle time watching soap operas, while others were not as idle participating in club sports. This year we also added a "creative candid" section where students were able to be themselves and show what student life is all about.

TAPS' 75th

Annual publication celebrates its 75th volume.

By Libby Subers

For years students' grades have suffered, but, in this case, apathy was not the cause. Furthermore, football games, dates, tests, and homework were sacrificed as endless hours, late nights, and weekends were dedicated to this service. But not every undergraduate had this excuse, only the select few, who for some masochistic reason, elected to slave over the publication of the yearbook.

What debuted in 1908 as a 308 page leatherbound, black and white annual featuring class portraits has evolved into a 544 page extravaganza with over 100 color pages. Instead of simply displaying "mug shots" of students, faculty, and administrators, TAPS now chronicles events that highlight the school year.

It took seventy-five volumes in seventy-seven years (TAPS was not published from 1944-1946 due to World War II) to progress from mug shots to hot shots. Along the way, the traditions of quality and creativity were handed down from senior staffs to junior staffs.

The early books were black and white with an emphasis on artwork plates in an accent color or gray. Fifty years later, the first four-color photograph was introduced. In the late Sixties, the style shifted from an emphasis on class portraits to one of feature articles, and the design changed to a magazine format. The Seventies saw a more sophisticated layout style with improved photography and expanded use of color. 1984 introduced individual layout styles for each of the six different sections.

Perhaps the most drastic change has occurred in photography with an evolution in emphasis from class portraits to candid. The photography staff is now responsible for taking all candid and group shots run in the book as well as the development of all color film (koda-chrome not included) and the development and printing of all black and white photos with the exception of the class portraits.

While all this design and developing may take up time (and let me assure you, it does), TAPS staffers have, in the past, had their fair share of fun (as if staying up all weekend to turn in 120 pages isn't fun). Several members of the 1976 staff road-tripped to Washington, DC, in a legendary appropriation of a University vehicle. The staff got away with the prank until the Motor Pool received the Exxon bill. Somewhat proud of their notoriety, the staff printed evidence of their misconduct in the 1976 TAPS.

For seventy-five years, students have forsaken sleep, grades, social life, and tests for this publication. This dedication has paid off not only in providing an outstanding account of campus events, but also in becoming one of the best annuals in the nation, consistently winning first place awards from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association and the South Carolina Press Association.

Sun Daze

Spring fever hits epidemic proportions

By Libby Subers and Suzanne M. Fort

“Spring forward and fall back” well defines the change in daylight saving’s time but not the transition students experience when springtime hits. The past spring was no exception. With the warm, sunny afternoons, students were out and about enjoying the sunshine and leaving their classes and grades to fall back into oblivion.

On a clear spring day, classes slipped to the bottom of the “things to do today” list. Sun worshippers sprang out all over; on the ledges of Johnstone, Bowman Field, East Bank and Y-beach, the deck at Fike, and most any spot where the sun’s rays could be caught. Beer gardens sponsored by the Union were also popular Friday afternoons at East Bank.

Students found the warm weather perfect for outdoor activities such as tennis, frisbee, and jogging. If a student were not the active type, he could enjoy spectating lacrosse, rugby, or baseball games. Participating in or spectating at such activities allowed everyone to get outdoors and enjoy the beautiful weather; there was always fall semester to bring up the GPR!

There were, however, some students who could not wait until fall to improve their academic status. For these unfortunate, summer school was a must.

The first two weeks of summer school were idyllic. Students adjusted to the every-day routine of classes, arriving at class in shorts and tee shirts. The monotony of ninety-minute classes was broken up by gazing out the window, deciding where to lay out that afternoon and where to drink that night.

But this peacefulness—this absence of 7000 or so students, this lack of lines (above right) After terrorizing students in Harcombe, these campers head for the gameroom for more action.

in Harcombe (and the canteen), this void of students downtown—was not meant to last. For two weeks into summer school, the campers arrived.

Goodbye, quiet dining. Goodbye, working elevator in Johnstone. And goodbye playing your favorite video game in the gameroom, the canteen, and Chanelo's. Hello, ten-year-olds practicing their pitches in Harcombe—with Jello. Hello, ice cream. Ice cream on the floors, on the stairs, in the elevator, in the plaza, and occasionally in the gameroom. And hello, water balloons "accidentally" falling from C-section windows.

Spring fever

Campers were something to bitch about while studying, drinking, and laying out. Methods of torture were a popular topic in certain circles. Methods of extermination were also discussed.

Students, however, did not spend all their time plotting assassinations of campers. On May 30, the sky turned dark as the moon covered the sun. Students raced to the windows of their 11:30 classrooms and peered out. Several hundred people stood in the courtyard beside Kinard and photographed the total eclipse through a silver mylar "space blanket."

Not all the changes in Clemson were as fleeting as the eclipse. The Benet parking lot was ripped up and repaved, much to the chagrin and inconvenience of shoebox residents and Sistine professors. Reconstruction of the parking lot limped along until two days before students returned for the fall semester. In a mad rush, the ground was rolled, paved and painted, complete with Iptay numbers.

As the fall semester started and all the students rolled in, the summer came to a close even though it did not officially end until September 21. The carefree days of morning classes, afternoons in the sun, and evenings downtown were replaced by a full day of classes, labs, and homework. But the evenings downtown did not cease. This tradition continued year round regardless of campers, classes, or seasons.

BENGAL BALL

Survival of the Fittest

By Suzanne M. Fort

Bill Spitzer

At 12:00 the gates opened. By 12:01 the kegs were tapped, and the 12th not-so-annual Bengal Ball began. Approximately 3500 students attended the festivities which included live music and unlimited beer at Y-beach. Comedy acts were also provided on and off the stage!

Even though the weather forecast called for showers all day, it appeared as though the forecasters were to be proven wrong again. The day began with warm temperatures and hardly a trace of clouds in the blue sky — a perfect Bengal Ball day. At 11:00, many students started lining up at the gate with coolers and gallon containers. Most welcomed the summerlike temperatures by donning bathing suits and shorts. Shades with strings attached were popular among many who wanted to go incognito after a rough Friday night or who merely wanted to look cool. As time progressed, everything flowed smoothly, especially beer and clouds. Jack Gallagher, a comic juggler, started the day's entertainment lineup. Following the comedian's well-received performance, Marianna Pace and her band, E, took the stage. The band put on such a good show that they literally played up a storm — a real storm which sent Bengal Ballers scattering.

Many went home; however, the die-hards sought various shelter — under the stage, blankets, and trees, in vans and the Y-barn, or some just roughed it in the rain. After an hour of rain, the clouds disappeared and the sun returned — leaving the headline group, the Spongetones, faced with a hardcore, raging crowd. Before the band took the stage, a now graduated rugby player took it upon himself to entertain this crowd with nude mudsliding. His efforts were applauded as he was taken away by the security guards and pleaded for mercy exclaiming, "They only let me out for one day!"

Bengal Ball was a great success for everyone involved — CDCC, the entertainers (well, most of them), students, and Budweiser of Anderson! However, as in the past, the future of Bengal Ball may be questionable — this time as a consequence of the new drinking age. Whatever the future may be, everyone who participated would agree that Bengal Ball '84 was an event never to be forgotten even though details may be cloudy.

MINOR LEAGUE

Club sports provide a taste of the big time

By Sue Dawson and Mark Peebles

Club sports offer a great deal to the students who enjoy participating on the intercollegiate level. These organizations offer a high degree of competition, yet are not as restrictive to a student's schedule as varsity athletics. Fencing, gymnastics, waterskiing, volleyball, lacrosse, rugby, soccer, ultimate frisbee, and football clubs all are actively involved in intercollegiate competition.

The gymnastics club, coached by Scott Slayback and Jana Evans, is composed of experienced gymnasts as well

The men's rugby team is comprised of a group of individuals who always manage to stand out whether on the field or in Sloan Street Tap Room. The team belongs to the Palmetto State Rugby Union which provides competition with major ACC schools as well as some of the smaller state schools. The team was very successful in the fall ACC tournament in which Clemson tied for third overall with University of Virginia. Also, two outstanding members of the rugby team were chosen as Select Side representatives (equivalent of All-Stars in other sports). Mark Perreault and Todd Welsh were chosen, based on their overall performances during last year's spring semester and their more recent ACC performances. The team also competes in the State tournament which was held this year in Columbia as well as the Savannah Rugby Tournament, according to team captain, Jim Kelley.

Traditionally a recreational sport at Clemson, the water ski club is now also competitive. This group has rapidly established itself as a strong team by qualifying for the fall nationals after outstanding performances in the Southeastern Atlantic Conference.

The women's soccer club, new this year, is coached by a former men's varsity soccer player, Carmen DeRose. Nancy Linn and Tracy Carver were responsible for developing enough enthusiasm for the sport to enable the club to be officially recognized and, therefore, begin competing this fall. During the fall season, they played against three-year National Champions University of as beginners who wish to further develop their skills. Since the NCAA declared competition against a club team unofficial, it is not advantageous for varsity schools to compete with Clemson; therefore, the team's opportunities for competition are very limited. Each year Clemson participates in a combined meet with Virginia Tech, University of Virginia, and William and Mary. Dual meets are held against Western Carolina, Georgia Tech, and Georgia College. Also, once a year, the gymnasts perform a demonstration during halftime at a basketball game.

The Clemson Ultimate Frisbee Club, more "infamously" known as the Joint Chiefs of Waft, is a member of the Ultimate Players Association (UPA). Ultimate frisbee is a fast game that combines several different features of basketball, soccer, and football. It's played with seven-member teams, the ultimate object being to pass the frisbee to other team members until scoring by having a player catch the frisbee in the end zone . . . all while complying to complicated rules.

In the fall season, there are three major UPA tournaments — the Sectionals, the Regionals, and the Nationals. Also, this fall, the club hosted the Seventh Annual Joint Summit Tournament which is the longest running frisbee tournament in the South. The spring season involves a series of tournaments against some ACC and southern coastal colleges.

(above) Members of the rugby team look forward to the road trips almost as much as they do to the matches, which is obvious here.

Minor League

North Carolina as well as many other southeastern schools.

The sailing club competes in the north district of the South Atlantic Intercollegiate Sailing Association (SAISA). The team competes against other ACC schools as well as many other South Carolina colleges. During the fall and spring seasons, the club competes in three major regattas in an attempt to qualify for competition against the southern half of the SAISA district and, ultimately, the nationals. Team captains are Chuck Thompson, Brooks Mayberry, and Laura Davis. Joining them are their respective crew members Bill McKenzie, Mike Ross, and Cynthia Jamison.

The fencing club, a member of the United States Fencing League (USFL), competes throughout the school year primarily on an individual basis in open tournaments. The team is led by five members who were formerly varsity competitors — Bill Shuford, Andy Harrison, Bo Franco, Quinn Selsor, and Matt Tumlin. During the spring, Divisionals, Sectionals, and Nationals are held in which individuals must qualify for each respective competition from their standings in the preceding tournament.

The lacrosse club has been fighting to keep its head above water recently as it has had difficulty obtaining funds from the University. This is surprising since the club finished the 1984 season with a 9-3 record. This record is highly respectable considering that this dynamic sport is so new to the South. Although the sport is primarily active in the spring, some tournaments are scheduled during the fall. This fall the team was invited to compete in the Charlotte tournament yet was unable to attend because of lack of funds. During the spring, the lacrosse club plays a number of schools including University of South Carolina, Georgia, Furman, and The Citadel. According to team captain Scott Peterson, if the team is able to overcome its financial problems and continues to develop its talent, it may soon have players chosen for the All-Star United States International Lacrosse Association Team.

Paul Simpson

Bill Spitzer

The volleyball team, a member of the United States Volleyball Association (USVBA), is new this year and is made up of inexperienced but highly motivated individuals. The team primarily competes against Carolina Region schools and, also, against one of the strongest teams in the South, the University of Tennessee. The team aspires to improve enough to become an AA ranked team which would be a major accomplishment since the sport of volleyball has been traditionally weak in the South.

The club football team is primarily comprised of players who were very successful in high school yet do not have the size to make the varsity team here. This year the team had four away games as well as four home games.

These games included North Carolina State, Davidson, Duke, University of North Carolina-Wilmington, and Appalachian State. Playoffs, also an important part of the season, were held in November and December. Co-captains David Wells and Larry Dowler were able to attain a large budget this year in order to expand the team's size as well as purchase new equipment that was necessary.

The club sports at Clemson offer a wide variety of activities in which students can become involved on the inter-collegiate level. Although most of the teams do not require attendance at all practices, a great many of the athletes are very dedicated and work hard to achieve their goals.

FIRST FRIDAY

Students "Zap the Apps"

By Evelyn Gora

"Orangemania" is spreading the land, and Clemson fans were out to show it at the Eleventh Annual First Friday Parade. On a clear, warm evening of August 31, the parade kicked off the 1984 football season against Appalachian State. Clemson students, residents, and alumni lined the streets down Clemson Avenue, with paw prints everywhere. Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity again sponsored the parade with Chairman Jeff Emrick. The Pika's led the parade holding this year's theme, "Zap the Apps." Central Spirit gave out balloons as clowns also added to the excitement. The band played the tune "Tiger Rag," shaking the Southland, and this year's hit song "Ghostbusters."

Sororities, fraternities, and organizations worked continuously throughout the week prior to the parade. The floats were constructed of the usual chicken wire and tissue paper; however, some were given moving parts for added creativity. Finally, after hours of arduous work, the mobile exhibits were ready for the parade.

As the floats wheeled by the judge's stand, they were judged on originality and execution. The competition was tight, but judges seemed to pick their favorites and announced the winners at the pep rally. In the sorority division: Delta Gamma brought home first, Delta Delta Delta took second, and third went to Kappa Delta. The American Institute of Chemical Engineers won the organization division, Alpha Phi Omega placed second, and Alpha Gamma Rho took third. Dormitory honors went to B-8 and B-5 of Johnstone.

In addition to the floats, many others participated in the parade. This year, Walter Cox, Vice President of Student Affairs, acted as the parade's Grand Marshal. University President Bill Atchley and various “beauty queens” also rode before the crowd along the parade route.

The parade moved down to the Amphitheatre, and people filled the theatre for the pep rally. The cheerleaders led the excited crowd into various cheers. Rolls of toilet paper flew about everywhere. There was a near mishap when the head cheerleader slung a record album, frisbee-style, into the audience nearly hitting a student's head. Otherwise, the parade and pep rally were one great success as was the game the next day. The Tigers “Zapped the Apps” in a 40-7 victory.

As the channels turn . . .

By Suzanne M. Fort

The addicts were easily spotted. No matter how hard they tried, they could not beat the habit. Every afternoon they could be seen getting their daily fix — on the seventh floor of the Student Union, in dorm rooms, or in fraternity lounges. Nothing could stop them; no one even tried. Yes, they were soap opera addicts.

Soaps were as popular as ever on campus this year. Would Bo and Hope ever get together? Did Beth forget Philip for Lujack? Did Celia even know which Grant was which? These questions and others were some of the reasons why students religiously tuned into these shows.

It all innocently began with the first This unknown soap fiend relaxes daily with "Days of Our Lives."

viewing. Of course, the following episode had to be watched to satisfy the naive student's curiosity. Each episode ended with so many question marks that the students were destined to become addicted. Also, many soaps became programmed towards a younger, college-aged audience making the shows even more appealing.

The addiction occurred overnight and progressed daily. Addicts lived for the next day. Their main topic of conversations in the classrooms, dorms, and downtown became soap operas. At night they lost sleep trying to solve the mystery of three prisms from "Days of Our Lives." The true addicts were the ones who scheduled classes around their show's time slot at preregistration. These hardcore fans certainly had their priorities in order!

Will there ever be a cure for these addicted students? Will the soap opera die-hards tune into the same program at the same time every weekday? Will these Clemson students ever get their priorities straight? Tune in next year.

HOMECOMING '84

By Ann Turner

Paul Simpson

The excitement and expectation of Homecoming 1984 began as early as Monday when the preliminary float building began. The erection of the telephone poles for the floats aroused curiosity in newcomers and anticipation in others, thus signalling the beginning of a week filled with spirit and activities.

Tuesday night, October 16, Tillman Hall Auditorium was filled to capacity as the ten finalists for the title of 1984 Miss Homecoming were chosen. The program began with Marian Cranford introducing the two numerous other local pageants.

Following the entertainment of Antonio Pinckney singing "Still", fifty-six girls, sponsored by various organizations, had their moment on stage, one at a time, as they were introduced. Antonio Pinckney reappeared after the girls were presented and sang "Lady".

The fifty-six contestants, then not quite so nervous, returned for the evening gown competition. This was followed by a show performed by the Rally Cats and an appearance by last year's Homecoming Queen, Beth Cousins.

Finally, the ten finalists were announced. The finalists included: Kelley Kastory, sponsored by Barnett Dormitory; Cynthia Greene, sponsored by the Rally Cats; Gwendolyn Baity, sponsored by Kappa Delta Pi;

tions were held to choose a queen from among the ten Homecoming Queen finalists chosen Tuesday night. Booths were set up with pictures of the contestants, and students could vote from 9:00 AM until 5:00 PM in front of the library or the dining halls.

By Friday afternoon the town of Clemson, busy with alumni, friends, and fans, showed signs of the true meaning of Homecoming weekend. All the long hours of planning, preparing, pumping, partying, and practicing that go into making Homecoming what it is were coming to a close. The show was about to begin. By 7:00 p.m. Friday night, the spirit broke loose as the traditional Tigerama started.

Emceed by Jane Robelot and Russ Cassell, WFBC Radio Morning Show Host, Tigerama began with a pep rally done in true Tiger style featuring the Tiger Band and the cheerleaders. After spirit was aroused, various fraternities and sororities performed skits to the theme of "Cartoon Clemson", and were judged on ingenuity, creativity, and constructive merit. The entertaining skits ended, and the audience waited for the crowning of Miss Homecoming 1984. The four runners-up were announced as follows: Julia Barton, fourth runner-up; Martha Murray, third runner-up; Susan Shuttlesworth, second runner-up; and Cynthia Greene, first runner-up. Finally, Kimberly Dooley was announced as this year's Homecoming Queen. Despite her nervous excitement, Kim read the names of the winning skits. They were: third place, Alpha Tau Omega; second place, Phi Delta Theta; and first place, Pi Kappa Alpha with their rendition of "Toogy Doo".

Tigerama ended with an exploding display of fireworks that left everyone excited and full of spirit that would last through the night.

Students and others continued the Homecoming festivities, either downtown at the bars or on Bowman Field helping to pump the displays. The floats provided an all-night party with loud music and plenty of fun despite the work that had to be done. Occasionally, a resounding cheer was heard indicating that yet another float was completed.

By morning, the floats were standing tall and proud and full of spirit to a crowd of onlookers and appreciators. Many fans stared in amazement and pride at the colorful sculptures while the children of alumni and fans delighted in the fantasy world created by the fraternities.

The football game began like most others with the team charging down the hill while thousands of orange-clad fans roared. At half-time, with a secure lead of 41-0, the crowd could relax to Tiger Band while the new 1984 Homecoming Queen, Kim Doolley, and her court greeted the crowd as they rode on a tiger-pulled float built by Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Also, a band composed of alumni marched on the field and played "Tiger Rag" with the Tiger Band. Afterwards, winners of the floats were announced. In the moving display category, the awards were: first place to Alpha Gamma Rho with "He Tiger and the Masters of the ACC"; second place to Phi Delta Theta with "Indiana Tiger and the Valley of Death"; and third place to Sigma Nu with "ACC Carnival".

In the still display category, the following displays were awarded: Chi Psi, first place with "Clemson: A National Tradition salutes Liberty: A National Treasure"; Pi Kappa Alpha, second place with "On the Road Again"; and Kappa Sigma third with "Don't Get Slimed by the ACC: Call Coastbusters."

The Tiger football team returned to the field to defeat Duke with a 54-21 romping. William Perry set two new records during the game — one for the most quarterback sacks and another for causing the opposing team to lose yardage. Overall, the day was spectacular to Tiger fans.

And that night, Bill Cosby entertained a full house at Littlejohn Coliseum. Stanley Jordan, jazz guitarist extraordinaire, opened with a mesmerizing performance. In the following fifteen-minute intermission, the audience took it upon themselves to provide the entertainment. First initiating a "wave" through the coliseum, the crowd then moved into alternate cheering with chants of "Jello . . . Pudding," "Tastes great . . . Less filling," and "Fat . . . Albert." When the chants turned to "Bill . . . Cosby," the show started as the famed comedian jogged onto the stage donned in an orange sweatsuit.

His routine centered on the family, from his wife — "Men only think they are in charge," to his children —

"My son's favorite words are 'No problem!'" Cosby stood up for fathers and exhorted the audience to improve their Father's Day presents. Cosby's material appealed to everyone, whether young or old.

The spirit of Homecoming was carried late into the night as the partying continued. But as Monday rolled around and the remains of the displays were removed, the sign on Bowman Field advertising Tigerama and Homecoming 1984 was also taken away, thus clearing away all the visible signs that Homecoming 1984 had occurred. But nothing could erase the memories of the spirit and excitement of this special weekend in Tigertown.

TAPS SALUTES

The University Chorus – a dedicated lot

By Don Lusk and Mary Anderson Seabrook

These pages are devoted to a special group of students whose endeavors to promote the University have required many sacrifices. Despite their undertakings, this group has received little recognition. For their efforts, TAPS salutes the dedicated members of the University Chorus.

The University Chorus was a formal concert ensemble dedicated to the study and performance of a wide variety of choral music. This expressive communication ranged from pre-Renaissance to contemporary music performed with a high degree of excellence. Since the University had no music major, the Chorus also served as a service organization for students who loved to sing.

Since its inception, the Chorus has undergone many changes. In the mid 1940's, Dr. Hugh McGarity was hired to conduct what was then only a Men's Glee Club. He was best remembered as the composer of our Alma Mater. In the mid 1960's when co-eds were admitted, the Women's Glee Club was founded. Then in 1969, when the Music Department was formed, the Glee Clubs were combined to form the University Chorus. In the same year, the Chorus exchanged their small practice room in Godfrey Hall for a larger one in Daniel Hall. By 1970, Chorus was offered as a one-hour credit under the title of MUSIC 365.

In the fall of 1974, Dr. John Butler, the current head of the Music Department, began the tradition of performing Pre-game along with Tiger Band for all home football games. The present choral director, William W. Campbell, came to Clemson in January 1975 and has continued this tradition.

Along with the increase in membership from forty-five to as many as 120 students, the Chorus had expanded to encompass many subsidiary groups as well. These groups include the 4:30 Thursday Singers, the Men's Glee Club, the Women's Glee Club, the Barber Shop Quartet, and the Madrigal Choir.

The group that was suited for formal, large-scale entertainment was the 4:30 Thursday Singers. The Singers were the pop, jazz, and Broadway oriented "Show Choir". The ensemble included twelve people plus four alternates for each part, drums, electric bass, and piano. Many of the songs also included choreographed dance steps. Hours of rehearsal went into perfecting both song and dance phases of each number. The Singers served not only as entertainment for audiences, but also as a public relations group. They had performed for visiting VIP's, dinners, formal concerts, and with the "We're Proud to Say Clemson" road show that traveled throughout the state. The Singers performed for Strom Thurmond when he was inducted into the South Carolina Hall of Fame, and also with Bob Hope during the 1983 Homecoming festivities.

The Men's and Women's Glee Clubs performed at university functions such as banquets, dinners, and receptions for visiting dignitaries. They also served to expand the reading abilities of the performers. In the period from 1969 to 1982, the Glee Clubs did not exist. But in the fall of 1982, Dr. Willard Cottrell, a visiting professor during Campbell's two-year leave of absence, reinstated the Clubs. Some of their concert literature included popular music, traditional songs, and drinking songs. The Glee Clubs also performed, non-competitively, in Dixie Day's Fraternity Sing and

Other choral ensembles included the Barber Shop Quartet and the Madrigals. The Barber Shop Quartet was a group of four men who, of course, sang the "barber shop" type harmonies. They performed at dinners, banquets, and other university functions. The Madrigal Choir was composed of sixteen members who performed Renaissance music. They sang at many university events and hosted a "Madrigal Dinner". Members donned Elizabethan costumes, sang, and performed skits for anyone who wished to attend as the dinner was open to the public.

As a whole, the University Chorus performed at all home football games, halftime at the Homecoming game, joint concerts with the North Carolina State Chorus, fall and spring concerts in Tillman Hall and, occasionally, joint concerts with the Symphonic Band. During their two formal concerts, all of the adjunct choral ensembles also performed. They also represented Clemson in the Intercollegiate Choral Festival which included choral ensembles from USC, Furman, Winthrop, and other colleges.

Other activities of the chorus included singing at the annual Christmas tree lighting on Bowman Field, Christmas caroling around campus, touring local churches and high schools, participating in choral workshops, and a small contingent even sang the National Anthem before home basketball games. All of these activities took time away from the students, but that was the sacrifice they were willing to make in order to sing.

The Chorus also went on tour during the spring semesters. Since they had no funds for a large tour, they only toured the immediate area. Some tours in the past have been to Atlanta, Knoxville, Charleston, Gatlingburg, Myrtle Beach, Charlotte, and other towns in the four-state area. Though they were not "big" tours, they brought some recognition to Clemson and the Chorus itself.

Also, a scholarship was available for a piano accompanist for the Chorus. The Howard L. Hunter Memorial Scholarship was a $1,000 a year gift awarded on the basis of an audition. Tracy Garrett received the award in 1984.

According to director William Campbell, although the Chorus had been doing excellent work, the conditions could have been better. The Chorus had outgrown its practice room in Daniel Hall so much that when choreography was involved, they had to rehearse in the halls. Also, the budget had been increased only once since the founding of the University Chorus in 1969. Since the budget was so limited, large tours were not possible and risers were purchased only recently. Strom Thurmond recently invited the Chorus to come to Washington, D.C., but there was not enough money in the budget to allow the trip.

Still, Campbell said that he was very optimistic about the future. "During the second phase of the Thurmond Institute," he said, "a Performing Arts Center is to be built." With the Center, he hoped that a Performing Arts major would be established as well. The major would consist of studies in music, dance, and theatre with an emphasis in one of these areas. He also noted that some students leave Clemson for other colleges and that some high school students choose other colleges because of the lack of a music major. "The Performing Arts major," he said, "should correct that problem."

However, what really made the Chorus special was the students. These people voluntarily took time out of their schedules to practice what they loved to do — sing. They sacrificed homework, dates, and other social activities to spend two hours a day practicing and many more performing. Since there was no music major, the time spent singing was even more precious and enjoyable because only truly dedicated students were members.

At times, they admitted, it did get frustrating. But like all families, they pulled together and continued ahead. The members showed their appreciation of each other by giving a member the Hugh McGarity Award. This award was voted on by all the members and was given to the upperclassman who exhibited outstanding service to the organization.

These students, the members of the University Chorus, spent many hours perfecting what they do best and received very little credit and recognition. They held one certain song especially close to them — "What Would I do Without My Music" by Harry Middlebrooks and Bruce Belland. This song became a type of theme and exemplified how they felt about their music. Thus, for their efforts, TAPS salutes the members of the UNIVERSITY CHORUS!

*What would I do without my music,
 What would I do without my song.
 What would I do without my music,
 To make it right when ev'rything seems so wrong.*

 Dreams start rebuilding strong and high
 And I know tho' I may not be winnin'
 I'm a long, long way from losin' if I try*

And I think . . .

*What would I do without my music,

ALTERED ESTATES

Students experience alternative lifestyles

By Tanya Cater

Living on-campus is an experience that all students should try at least once. It can be beneficial and does have some advantages. However, living off-campus has some better qualities to offer.

Dorms are great for their central location because you can always sleep late and still be on time for class. Also, by living on-campus you are around a lot of people. This is good for freshmen who are trying to make new friends. Another advantage to on-campus life is that you are always up-to-date on campus events unless, of course, you are one who does not read The Tiger or any of the many bulletin boards.

While living on-campus you never have to clean bathrooms, wash dishes, or any of that nasty work. All custodial and maintenance services are included. Another luxury is having phone service and STAN numbers. There is also someone in the housing office to assist anyone with any problems, and the staff has a feeling of responsibility to help the freshmen with the transformation from high school to college.

There are some disadvantages to living on-campus such as the walk from your car parked in the pit late at night (or even during the day for the lazy ones!), the rules and regulations of being in a dorm, and the noise. Also, the rooms are almost closet-size and your roommate might not be up to your standards or be your ideal choice.

There is an alternative to living on campus — living off-campus! Living in an apartment off-campus is a lot of fun. You have more freedom and no visitation rules. You can live with the persons of your choice and, of course, your car is just outside the door! This way the junior cops do not have a chance at giving you a ticket!

Living off-campus also provides a "homey" atmosphere. Most apartments have one or two bedrooms, a living and dining room area, and a fully-equipped kitchen. Paying monthly rent, electricity, and phone bills prepares students to be responsible members of the real world.

There are some disadvantages to living off-campus. Being far from campus and not having a car often becomes an excuse for missing classes! If you do have a car, parking it in the pit could become a problem. The parking lots become a war zone with everyone fighting for a place. When you do get a spot there is a lot of uphill walking to get to classes. Another disadvantage is that you get out of touch with what is happening on campus and are not as close to other students as you would be in a dorm.

The cost of living off-campus could be a disadvantage or an advantage depending on where you live, how conservative you are, and how much you eat. However, you can save money in the long run if you budget your money. Apartments run from $300-$500/month — which is then divided by two or more people. Therefore, a student may live with two others, pay $100/month plus utilities, and feel satisfied knowing that the University is not taking him for all he has got.

Ed Morgan

The cost of on-campus housing varies also. It can run from $400-$700 a semester. The women's shoe box dorms and the frat quad dorms currently cost $500 a semester. The newer high rises cost $550 a semester. Students can enjoy the comfort of apartment living in Thornhill Village ($615 a semester, Village Green ($650), or Calhoun Courts ($700). However, these student housing apartments include utilities in their fees which does not allow students the experience of bill paying.

The advantages and disadvantages of on and off-campus living are there — it's up to the individual student to decide which is best for him.

New drinking laws plague underclassmen

By Sue Kostner

When the summer of 1985 arrives, South Carolina will have joined many states in an effort to raise the legal drinking age from nineteen to twenty-one years of age. The change will occur as a gradual transition in two steps. On January 1, 1985, the law will constitute only those over the age of twenty to purchase beer and wine. The first day of June will prove to be an ominous one as the ordinance is furthered. The law will permit no one under the age of twenty-one to buy alcoholic beverages. With such a drastic change in the legal drinking laws, local bars had to change as well. Having to enforce stricter regulations for admittance into their place of business, proprietors anticipate a net loss of at least thirty-five percent of their customers. While the bars expect to draw a more dense crowd of older clientele, they are doubtful that the new customers will match the lost patronage.

The taverns are looking towards other means to retain their customers. The proprietors have concluded that adding kitchens for the purpose of food service was one concept. With the addition of a kitchen, taverns could obtain a liquor license. South Carolina law states that in order to serve mixed drinks the structure must contain a kitchen. Plans are being made at many bars to alter the present floor plans to accommodate the kitchens. Construction will go underway within the next year. Another pull on the owner's purse strings is the addition of new employees to the payroll. The recently acquired staff would be on hand for bartending, food service, and proofing of age.

In places of liquor consumption, customers are required to present a valid form of identification. The ID must have a picture and birthdate in order to be sufficient. There are basically two methods of carding. Most owners prefer to have a staff member stationed at the entrance. Others admit everyone through the door but when alcoholic beverages are ordered, the patron will be asked to produce his/her proof of age. The oppressive laws are producing an abundance of fake ID's. These invalid documents, when recognized, can be confiscated and/or the police will be notified.

The same opinion has surfaced from person to person — people think that the new decree will hurt everyone. It will take patrons away from the alcohol-serving businesses and at the same time put those people on the street — “out of the bars and into the cars.”

Downtown Clemson takes on a new look

By Suzanne M. Fort

The 1985 graduating class was the only class left who could reminisce about “the great times we had our freshman year at the Bookstore.” The few and the proud could even boast that they drank their first college beer at the infamous dive. What happened to the Bookstore is what has happened to many of the establishments downtown. This year, especially, main street Clemson went through many changes.

The Bookstore was rebuilt as the Corporation in spring of 1982. After a stay of approximately one year as Clemson’s number one hot spot for bebops, its doors closed having lost its crown to a newcomer — the family restaurant turned disco, College Station. The summer of 1984 saw the opening of Strawberry’s, a “Bennigan’s-type” restaurant, in place of the Corporation.

Next door to Strawberry’s, on the corner of College Avenue and Seneca Road, Bojangle’s Fried Chicken and Biscuits was built. Students seemed to like the idea of biscuits all day long. Bojangle’s could always brag business was great and that there was always “standing room only”. But that is because that’s ALL there was at Bojangle’s . . . there were NO tables or chairs. The Bojangles neon sign spoke for itself.

And if anyone doubted that there was not enough orange in Clemson, I.M. Ibrahim made sure there was. The former downtown theater and raging Roundtable bar were bought by Ibrahim and converted into the Tiger Sports Shop and The Athletic Department, respectively.

Further down College Avenue, Clemson acquired yet two more convenience stores, the Pantry and Hess Mart, both complete with gas pumps, instigating price wars. These additions brought the total number of convenience stores to six — all downtown!

There have been a few new and original businesses established in the recent past. Students could take a break from the fast food joints and eat at Jean’s Juice Bar or A Slice of Heaven, both located downtown. Hair salons were a new idea too, as Trends and Hair South were established. In addition to hairstyling, both offered tanning booths and Trends also did “color analysis.” For the “extra-unordinary” student, the Go Shop was established. Many students shopped here in preparation for a trip to Atlanta or merely to be individualistic.

Los Hermanos, a Mexican family restaurant, filled recently vacated Legends in the University Square Mall. Although in the past many businesses have not lasted too long in this spot, Los Hermanos may be here to stay.

Shoney’s, located next to Winn Dixie, was built in the fall of 1984, and the all-you-can-eat breakfast bar soon became the talk of the town. Some students were not satisfied with the weekend service hours of the breakfast bar — 6:00 AM was too late to open while 2:00 PM was too early to close! (College students keep odd hours.) A 24-hour weekend breakfast bar might be something for Shoney’s to consider in a college town! There was also a Dippity Doughnuts opened in Victoria Square — a long awaited addition for early morning or late night munchies.

“Downtown Clemson” itself could never change in character. However, within the four (give or take a few) years a student spends here, many businesses come and go, leaving behind a vacant space to be filled by another entrepreneur ready to take a shot at becoming a permanent tradition in Tiger Town.

Institution loses upstream struggle to Fin's

By Debbie Myers

When I returned to Clemson in the fall of 1984 to finally put an end to my student career, I realized that over the course of four or more years, I had accumulated a fairly sizeable amount of junk. Now, when I got to Clemson, I knew two things: 1) All of my junk had to get inside my apartment, and 2) I SURELY was not going to be the one to carry it all in! Therefore, I got on the phone to try to recruit volunteers. I figured I would have to bribe these people, and beer was my first thought. However, I soon decided that these guys were really doing me a big favor so I should think of something really nice. Armed with an offer that could not be refused, I called my first victim.

"Hey, Greg! How are you? Yeah, I'm fine. Listen, would you mind helping me move a few things into my apartment?" Then I tossed out the bait, "I'll take you to The Study Hall."

That was when I heard the most distressing news I have heard all year. No, Greg did not tell me to take a hike; it was worse — he told me that The Study Hall had closed.

August 4th, 1984, a Clemson tradition came to an end. Twenty years of good times and good food "celebrated" its final days that weekend. Carol Finley, co-owner of the establishment did not plan any official "Goodbye Study Hall" party; however, her regular customers gathered in a farewell tribute to The Study Hall that weekend.

When Barry and Carol Finley bought The Study Hall four years ago from Bill Hopkins, Mrs. Finley stated that there were not many other restaurants in town, and that The Study Hall was about the only place to get a good hamburger or sandwich. However, within the past few years, an explosion of a vast variety of restaurants has occurred, many of which include fast food hamburger and sandwich joints. Mrs. Finley said that this vast expansion of restaurants had produced too much competition for The Study Hall. She realized, also, that closing down would cause a lot of heart ache for many, but stated that "we were a business first." The restaurant/bar was not prospering economically, and the Finley's decided there must be some change made.

I did not believe Greg. I thought he was just pushing for a dinner at Calhoun Corners. In fact I did not believe him until he dragged me downtown and introduced me to that notorious blue building, also known as Fin's Seafood. Now, I am sure that Fin's is a very fine place to eat; however, it will never be able to replace The Study Hall.

The Study Hall was converted into Fin's, a seafood chain which also has a branch in Greenville. Barry Finley owns the Fin's chain so the ownership of the establishment itself never changed hands. Many of the Study Hall's personnel now work for Fin's, including the legendary bartender Tommy "Pooh-Bear" Williams.

There were three things especially appealing about The Study Hall — good food, good people, and good drink. For those who never had the opportunity to visit The Study Hall, let me explain.

First of all, The Study Hall served some of the best food in town at reasonable prices. From their hamburgers (if you could manage to eat the whole thing you would need a wheelchair to leave!) to a wide variety of sandwiches to more gourmet dishes like lasagna and shiskebob — everything was delicious!

Secondly, but possibly more importantly, the clientele who frequented The Study Hall furnished it with an atmosphere unlike any other place in Clemson. Most of the patrons were fairly mature, intelligent, creative people. Since the music at The Study Hall was played at a low volume, conversation was possible. The Study Hall was a good place to meet friends for lunch and just talk. The atmosphere was very casual and relaxed.

Local businessmen, professors, graduate students, and older students made up the group of "regulars" at The Study Hall. According to Mrs. Finley, the regulars were those who still enjoyed going out for a beer, but did not want to put up with the crowds or the noise that the younger students enjoyed. Their customers were loyal and the Finleys hated closing down for their sake. Many of the regulars have changed their hangout to Penny Annie's or Nick's; however, many prefer to stay at home rather than go elsewhere.

These places could not compare to The Study Hall in anything from atmosphere to beverages. The Study Hall not only served wine and draft beer, but also stocked a wide variety of imported beers. As the majority of the business was from an older group, the hike in the legal drinking age was not a strong factor in the Finley's decision, although it did influence them slightly.

While all this was going on downstairs, the upstairs was also kept busy. The second floor of The Study Hall served as a restaurant, which also provided the same relaxed, casual atmosphere and the same delicious food. It was a perfect place to dine with family or friends.

Because many alumni returned to The Study Hall on football weekends, several people have described The Study Hall as "an institution, rather than a restaurant." However, this was one institution that would only remain in the memories of those who knew The Study Hall. What else can be said, Study Hall, the students of Clemson miss you!

College students have many choices to make. Sometimes it can be as simple as what to wear to classes or even whether or not to go to classes. But for some students, the choice is between playing in a band or keeping up with school.

There are several bands that play local bars and fraternity functions — bands whose members are also students. They include Rough Mix, Dot Matrix, Four Play, and Jeteye.

Roy Costner and Tim Bennett are in the group Four Play. Costner is a co-op student, so his situation is a little different than Bennett's, but they both have the same problem — lack of time.

"It's tough co-opping, because I can't help them set up," said Costner. "I can help with the sound when I get there. As long as it doesn't interfere with my work, I can cover for the others."

Bennett changed his major from Microbiology to Political Science so he could raise his GPR to help him get into Medical school. Without the change, he probably would not have stayed in the band.

"I'll always have music on the side," Bennett said. "But I want to go to medical school. I've always wanted to be a famous singer, but that's not what I was meant to be."

Dusty Singleton is in Dot Matrix. Like Bennett and Costner, he finds time a premium, but his aspirations are different.

"The band comes first," said Singleton, "especially considering the amount of time I've put into learning to play."

Though Singleton is a computer information systems major, his sights are set on a career in music. And music comes first.

"You can always come back to school," he said. "But you have to hit the music business while you are young."

Adam Morgan, a member of Rough Mix, wants to continue in the music business when he gets out of college, but his priorities still go "school first, music second."

"The band gets in the way of school sometimes, but school still comes first," said Morgan. "We try to play most of the time on weekends."

All say their parents are supportive. The support ranges from simple parental love and understanding, to buying the instruments. Singleton remembers having to "learn to play a song on a guitar before my father would buy me an electric guitar."

Bennett's parents, like Costner's, aren't thrilled with their group's name, but they are still supportive.

"They haven't been able to come up and see us play," said Bennett. "They are a little apprehensive, but they like to see me happy."

Morgan, who plays saxophone, may be a little different — his father played clarinet — but he thinks his parents still feel about the same way.

"It's all sort of mysterious to them," he said. "They still have mixed feelings about the band."

Costner could speak for the others when he talks about the audiences. "People we don't know will come up and say how much they enjoyed us," he said "Or they might come up to us after we haven't done our best and say 'we still enjoyed it.' That makes it worth it."

Singleton said he'd play just for the enjoyment, but the money has become important now. "We can ask for the money now. We have a lot of equipment. Our drummer has to come from Columbia, so he has those expenses. But most of the money goes back into a fund. We're going to cut three singles, and that takes money.

Four Play puts its money back into the equipment. "I don't think we get enough money for what we do," said Bennett. "But then we play for fun. Right now we are just paying for new equipment."

But they have all learned of the business side of music. "I didn't think we'd get this serious," said Bennett. "You have to deal with people and contracts."

Singleton is wary of the business side, saying you have to look out for yourself. "We've learned about the business side of the music world the hard way. You get screwed if you don't watch out."

Costner has a different view of the business side; one of his fellow group-members wishes he didn't have.

"I had a hard time asking for $300 a show. I don't think we should make that much money for having fun."

Costner said if it stops being fun, that's when he'll stop playing. "If it gets to be work, I'll quit."

Though Morgan is not as adamant about that philosophy, he does feel the same way. "We like to make it fun. That's what it's about anyway."

For some members, something suffers. For Costner, it's dating. For Singleton, if it comes down to either the band or grades, it may be grades.

Bennett said he feels everything is working out fine. He's meeting new people and having fun. If school and the group get to be too much, he'll quit the group.

"Sure, you're busy, but you meet a lot of new people. You make new friends. You make people smile. And that's the whole reason for playing."

Clemson spirit invades campus

By Rebecca Walmer

Spirit Blitz '84, sponsored by Student Government, sent the campus flying into a mad whirlwind on November 9. The Great Hokie Hunt led off a series of events, which included a pep rally, concert, laser show, paw painting, flashcards, and 21,500 balloons.

The Great Hokie Hunt was a riddle in which clues were given and participants were required to piece them together in order to win. The Tiger published a map and clues for the hunt which started Friday at 3:30 when WSBF-FM and WFBC-FM announced the critical clues that set students in motion. There were several stipulations: only Clemson students could participate; the hunt was to be completed on foot; and students could work alone or in pairs. Over 300 students participated in the hunt. The prizes were: first place, a trip to Cancun, Mexico; second place, a black and white television; and third place, a pizza from Harcombe. The first place winners were Jim Dalton and Tim Jones. It took them three hours to complete the hunt.

The festivities continued on the intramural fields at 7:00

The Spongetones concert followed the pep rally. They played music of the Sixties — including the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, and the Doors — turning the intramural field into Clemson University's largest dance floor. The band played two sets before relinquishing the audience's attention to Lasercast, a laser-light show imported from New York City. Lasercast was the first of its kind displayed in South Carolina. The show consisted of images, such as tiger paws, "Up Roar '84," and "Spirit Blitz," imprinted against a screen hung from the upper deck of the stadium.

The events for the next day centered around the football game against Virginia Tech. The Great Paw Painting was an effort to break the world's record of faces painted set by University of Alabama several weeks previous. Students were stationed around campus with orange paint in paw to help Virginia Tech fans show their pride. Even Virginia Tech fans got into the spirit of things. Clemson broke Alabama's record of 8,000 with a total of 42,611 faces painted.

Clemson's traditional enthusiasm continued with the pre-game show during which the entire crowd held up flashcards which depicted a different visage in each section: the west stands performed a dual purpose — an American flag during the Tiger Band's rendition of the National Anthem and a tiger paw as the football players charged down hill; "Clemson" and "Tigers" were flashed by the crowd in the upper decks; and "A National Tradition" and "Up Roar '84" were created by the coalition in the lower stands. Clemson's flashcard display mimicked that of the Opening Ceremony of the 1984 Olympics held in Los Angeles; however, Clemson fans made that extra Tiger effort when they used their cards during such cheers as "Orange-White" and "The Wave."

But flashcards were only the beginning. Tunnel Vision, the releasing of 21,500 orange, blue, and white balloons, continued the festivities. The multi-colored strands arched the field, and were released as the cannon fired. This act, however, was not without a slight problem — balloon planners had not expected the gusts of wind that drove the strings of balloons into the east end uprights. The start of the games was delayed as it took several people to untangle the balloons from the goal posts.

Spirit Blitz '84, the second of a new Clemson tradition, was termed a success by those in Student Government who helped plan and coordinate the weekend. Credit is due to those who made the weekend possible, and to those who participated. Once again, Clemson proved who is best — officially or unofficially.

Clemson Players gain national recognition

By Karrie L. Britton

It had been a good year for the Clemson Players. In 1983-84, the Player's production of "American Buffalo" was invited to perform at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. The opening night organization, called First Nighters, was a first year success and the Players saw several alumni move on to graduate schools for theatre. However, the Players saw even larger opportunities for the 1984-85 season.

The opening show of the year brought back a Clemson alumnus, Larry Hembree, as the guest director for the year. While at Clemson, Hembree was actively involved with the Players and he obtained his Bachelor of Arts in English with a minor in Theatre. Now at the University of Georgia, Hembree is working towards his Masters in

When Hembree chose "Come Back to the 5 & Dime Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean," he had several criteria in mind. Hembree wanted a medium-sized to large cast in order to support the Player's organization drive. Also Hembree wanted a play that depicted strong, believable women characters.

"Jimmy Dean" takes place in a Kressmont 5 & Dime in McCarthy, Texas. The action is set in two distinct time periods, 1955 and 1975, revolves around a reunion of "The Disciples of James Dean." The twenty-year interim created some interesting changes in the women who return for the reunion. The play is sometimes labeled comedy-drama because the funny happenings of Act I erupt into tragic truths about the women in Act II. "Jimmy Dean" was a great success and it primed the Players' audiences for a strong year of theatre. This strength grew with the choice of the second work for the year.

Director Jere Hodgkin chose a script that a graduate student had been working on for some time. The graduate student was Angela Elam, and her script saw its way to stage in early November. The show was Clemson's South Carolina Theatre Festival entry and all were convinced that it would advance to the regional level.

"Notes of a Family" deals with a Middle-aged woman and her relationship with her three daughters. The mother finds out that she has cancer and discussion of the disease brings out feelings that each character had long been holding. The play differed from many plays of this type, in that it deals more with family life on a day to day basis, rather than dwelling on the cancer itself.

Also at the South Carolina Theatre Festival, Clemson Player Advisor Clifton S.M. Egan was chosen President of the South Carolina Theatre Association. The Players were also presented the first winner of the Founder's Award. This award was established to recognize organizations or persons who have contributed the most to South Carolina in the previous year.

National recognition

After doing several lighter productions, the Players decided to embark on a challenging and award-winning play for their first show of 1985. Director Ray Sawyer, after careful consideration, chose to present Peter Shaffer's Equus. The play had won almost every available award after its 1974 opening on Broadway, including the prestigious Tony.

Equus is about a young boy's obsession with horses and how this obsession leads him to blind several horses with a metal spike. The religious overtones and sexual themes in the play had the Players prepared for some controversy. However, the Players received negative feedback for reasons totally unexpected.

The play was to include a brief scene containing total nudity. Dr. Sawyer discussed the feasibility of the scene with his cast and they decided that the scene would be played only topless.

One week before the show was to open, an article appeared in The Anderson Independent which implied that a senior at Clemson had been denied the role of Jill because she would not appear topless. The student later demanded a retraction by the paper because she said that there had been absolutely no discrimination.

However, the administration, fearing more bad press for the University because of the nudity, told the Players that they would not be allowed to do the scene as it had been originally intended by the director.

What followed was: Dr. Sawyer continued to work in an unofficial capacity with the show but announced that was formally resigning as the director because he viewed the administration's interference as a violation of his artistic integrity and academic freedom. The program also included the following statement from the company of Equus:

"This production of Equus is being presented under protest. The administration of Clemson University had forbidden the play's production in the form intended by the author. We, the undersigned, recognizing the value of the play beyond the particular disputed scene and believing in the importance of the educational experience, hereby present the play in altered form. However, we register strong objection to the abrogation of the artistic and creative freedom that is properly the director's province."

More importantly though, students began to question what was really important at Clemson. Very few students supported the administration's decision and the majority declared it an act of blatant censorship.

The show ended on an excellent note for the Players however, as they saw sold-out houses their last two nights. The audiences applauded the continuing commitment to fine theatre that has always been a Clemson Player Tradition.

Apathy wins by a landslide

By C. Kavin Taylor

Even though national elections were about a month away, it was hard pressed to find much sign of political life. There weren't political rallies or placards or even many campaign buttons. Some said it was because of rampant apathy, others said it was because the students were generally apolitical. Still others said it was because students felt Reagan had already won so it did not matter.

Wes Burnette, the advisor to the Young Democrats, saw the problem having a variety of reasons, ranging from the college environment to a swing to conservatism.

"The student body here is generally apolitical," said Burnette. "If this were another school, temperatures would be at a boiling point."

This lack of interest in politics is one of the major reasons Burnette blames for the low turnout at Young Democrat meetings. Another reason he cites is availability of other activities.

"Clemson students have outlets in other areas," he said. "There are just too many things competing for their time."

College Republicans saw about the same type of year with a core group of about thirty members, although some meetings had over one hundred people in attendance. David Woodward, advisor for the group, saw the problem with student apathy a little differently.

"I think the students here are a little more conservative than apolitical," he said. "I think they reflect the values found in the state."

Both groups were busy with voter registration, with the largest turnout following a speech by former presidential-hopeful Jesse Jackson. Sponsored by the Young Democrats and the Strom Thurmond Institute, some 300 students registered after the Jackson speech.

Burnette saw the problem reflected in students voting for student offices. Burnette said that he found it a little ridiculous to try to make the student government a replica of the United States government. "Most of these people don't know these people," he said. "They might vote for them because they are a friend of a friend."

And though both would agree there is a conservative trend in America, Burnette feels it has been exaggerated.

However, according to Woodward, within the apathy is a sense of confidence in politics. "It's not the pessimism of Watergate," said Woodward. "The students have grown up politically under two presidents. They are confident. They aren't cynical about the system."

(right) Local county agencies assist with student voter registration

Burnette also said he felt that some of the low attendance at groups like his may be because students no longer feel the need to be affiliated with one particular party.

"It's hard to find anyone committed to a party," he said. "But for those choosing, the Republicans are probably running away with it."

And though both agree on the general apathy, disagree on the causes, and have opinions as to who should have been elected, the process can be summed up quickly by Burnette:

"If they vote, they'll vote."

Kool and the Gang

By Scott Harke

On March 31, 1984, James Taylor came to town—not the solo performer, but the lead singer for Kool and the Gang. He brought the rest of the band also. Littlejohn was packed with fans as well as the curious. They were all treated to a fantastic sound and light show.

The opening act of the evening was The Dazz Band. Their lively rhythm and antics soon had the crowd on its feet. The fans got to be “in” the show by whippin’ to “Let It Whip” and controlling the “Joystick.”

Kool and the Gang came on stage to a crowd ready to jam, and they got what they wanted. James Taylor’s mother was in the audience—for Taylor is a native of South Carolina—and was serenaded by her son. They played many songs from their current album, “In The Heart,” including “Joanna,” “Tonight,” and “Straight from the Heart.” They also performed some songs from previous albums including “Jones vs. Jones.” They kept the crowd up and moving with their stage presence, good sounds, and lighting effects. All night the crowd waited for “Celebration” and was not disappointed. As usual, the song got people motivated, and it was also a summary of the performance. The Dazz Band and Kool and the Gang put on a celebration of good music and entertainment.

Heart

By Paul Simpson

Heart and Eddie Money entertained a relatively large audience in Littlejohn, despite the fact that many students had already left for spring break. Those who stayed for the show weren't disappointed. Eddie Money opened the show and performed such hits as "Shakin'," "I Think I'm In Love," and "Two Tickets To Paradise." In addition to singing, Money also played saxophone and harmonica.

The intermission was short, and when Heart took the stage, the crowd was ready to rock. The group, led by sisters Ann and Nancy Wilson, emphasized their latest work but also played many of their famous hits. Their newer material included "How Can I Refuse," "(Beat By) Jealousy," and the ballad "Allies." They also treated the crowd to a few new songs not yet on vinyl. The audience responded well. When Ann Wilson, lead vocalist, displayed the small rebel flag that had been thrown onto the stage, the crowd roared its approval. Nancy Wilson played an incredible extended acoustic guitar solo that opened the hit song "Crazy On You." The hits "Magic Man" and "Even It Up" were also well received. The crowd would not let Heart leave without giving an encore, so Heart came back on stage and finally played "Barracuda." Those who attended were treated to some good, solid Rock-n-Roll.

Pat Travers Band

By Scott Harke

Canadian born blues-rock guitarist, Pat Travers, and his band put on a tremendous show of rock and roll for a small crowd at Tillman Auditorium after Tigerama on Homecoming weekend. Jeteye, a local student band, opened the show, performing songs by such groups as Rush, ZZ Top, Journey, and Van Halen. The crowd became restless after a long intermission, but when Travers finally appeared and opened the set with "Snortin' Whiskey," the crowd responded with much enthusiasm.

Having released nine albums, Travers is certainly no newcomer to rock, even though he was greeted by a small crowd. He performed "Heat in the Street," "Gettin' Better," and "Go All Night," and showed his blues roots on the song "Stevie." He also performed material from his latest album including: "Killer," "Just Try Talkin' to those Dudes," and the title track "Hot Shot." Travers played a few new songs for his next album. All in all, the concert, sponsored by Sigma Alpha Epsilon, was very good, but a little loud for Tillman. However, that is to be expected from a rock guitarist who believes that "talent is a dull knife that will cut nothing unless it is wielded with a great force." Hopefully Clemson will be treated to other performers that rock as forcefully as the Pat Travers Band.

WILLIE NELSON

Suzanne M. Fort

December 3, the Honeysuckle Rose, Whiskey River, and Bohonkas drove into Clemson. Willie Nelson and his entourage entertained an almost capacity crowd at Littlejohn Coliseum that night. Billy Swan opened the show with three songs, which included his former hit "I Can Help." Swan was then joined by Kris Kristofferson. Kristofferson, a former West Point Rhodes Scholar, entertained the crowd with many foot-tapping, knee slapping country tunes. The crowd roared as Willie Nelson jogged onto the stage. The duo performed many songs from their movie, "Songwriter." Nelson left and later returned. "Whiskey River" started the set. Nelson performed more songs from the new movie and hits from years past. Nelson also sang "To All the Girls I've Loved" and filled in Julio Iglesias's part by doing a Spanish accent. As Nelson performed, Kristofferson watched from the side and joined in to add background vocals on several occasions. After Nelson left the stage, the crowd coerced him back to play a four-song encore. An all-time favorite, "The City of New Orleans," highlighted the set. Whether a country music fan or not, the crowd enjoyed the night of first rate entertainment. After the three-hour show, Nelson and his crew headed to their buses and were "On the Road Again."

Hall and Oates

By Paul Simpson

Big Bam Boom hit Clemson's Littlejohn Coliseum on February 24. What, you may ask, is Big Bam Boom? It is the Daryl Hall and John Oates tour to promote their Big Bam Boom album.

The opening act for the evening's festivities was Tommy Shaw, formerly with Styx. Much of their material was from the "Girl With Guns" album. Shaw's band packs a lot of experience into a small group: the drummer, Steve Holly, was previously with Paul McCartney and Wings. The saxophone player, Richie Cannatta can be heard on many of Billy Joel's albums. Brian Stanley on bass, was formerly with Elton John's band.

Hall and Oates opened with "Out of Touch". The crowd was mellow at first but got into the show after a few songs. The two hour show included many of the songs from Big Bam Boom, as well as old favorites. Fans rocked along with, "Rich Girl", "Private Eyes", and "Say It Isn't So."

During one section of the show, when Hall and Oates were taking a breather, each member of the band soloed. The bass player "rapped" with the audience and introduced the musicians before their jam. Hall and Oates will hopefully help to draw more big name acts to the University.

Bright floats and fun filled activities at Tigerama made way for the crowning of Kim Dooley as Miss Homecoming 1984. Kim, a senior in Political Science from Greer, South Carolina, described the experience as, "the most exciting thing that has ever happened." She, "couldn't believe it," after receiving the crown on that most memorable Friday night before the Homecoming game against Duke. Being a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority and a Sigma Alpha Epsilon Little Sister (her sponsor in the contest), keeps Kim very busy. She is also on the Research and Development Committee of Student Government and enjoys teaching aerobics as well as skiing and playing tennis in her spare time.

After the air cleared and the flour settled, Sandy Williams emerged as Miss Derby Days 1984. Sandy is a junior in Elementary Education from Pickens, South Carolina. She keeps herself busy in the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and also Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, for which she is a Little Sister. The importance of keeping in shape is where Sandy's main interests lie, which is why she enjoys such exercises as aerobics and running. On being selected Miss Derby Days, she said she was "excited and surprised." She also "Felt proud for her sorority because they worked hard to raise money and help her win."

Laughs, thrills, and beer drinking set the scene on Dixie Day as Cynthia Young from Asheville, North Carolina was crowned Miss Magnolia 1984. Cynthia, a senior Administrative Management major, is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority for which she presently holds the position of Social Chairman. She also dedicates her time to Student Government activities to include being a member of the Trial Court and the Student Traffic Review Board. Cynthia said the honor of Miss Magnolia was a "pleasant, unexpected surprise." Some of her many interests include water skiing, aerobics, and meeting people which explains why she has a deep love for travel.

Living the life of a Clemson swimmer is no easy task for Janney Zonneville, this year's Miss Taps. Practically right after birth in south Florida, Janney moved with her parents to South America, where she stayed for ten years living in countries such as Colombia and Argentina. Now a native of Spring Lake Heights, New Jersey, she is a junior majoring in Parks, Recreation, and Tourism Management. Her long days begin with strenuous workouts at the pool around 5:30 in the morning. However her dedication to Clemson swimming does not take away from her allowing time out for biking and camping.

Better known for his quickness and aggressiveness as a wing forward on the Clemson Rugby team, Keith Marcus, a junior in political science from Richmond, Virginia, was voted Mr. Taps 1985. Keith is involved in many campus activities including Model United Nations, Trial Court, and Blue Key, not to mention being a neighborly RA. He enjoys keeping up on the latest developments in international policy, which he hopes will eventually lead him to a lifetime of travel. People know Keith as being an outdoorsman because of his love in such activities as fishing, scuba diving, and canoeing.

Welcome to Academics — the real reason we are all here. While the Student Life section provided a glimpse at the wilder side of college, the following forty-two pages capture the essence of the intellectual life in 1984. Although some students worry more about which bar has the best specials than they do about their 8:00 test, most of us are dedicated to academics. Even though those all-nighters we pulled, cramming for exams, may not always seem worthwhile, we will eventually be thankful for our coveted diplomas when we begin that dreaded quest for employment. There are opportunities for everyone in every field—many of which we may not be aware. Come and explore all of these opportunities within the following pages as future tangents are discovered in the afterlife of college. Along with opportunities, you will meet a superlative professor, our special international students, visit the Language House, and learn about innovative research in the Bioengineering Department. You will also see the new Visitor's Center, the new Chemistry building, and the plans for establishing the Strom Thurmond Institute for Excellence in Government and Public Service. A major course of study was dropped by the College of Engineering and the Computer Science Department became involved in a computer chip project with some of the finest universities across the country. ## College of Engineering says farewell to Engineering Technology

By Miriam Watson

Anytime advancement is made, more than likely sacrifices follow. The College of Engineering has plans of great magnitude — in research and development — to become one of the more prestigious programs in the country. But to begin this process of upward mobility, something had to go; Engineering Technology was the sacrifice.

Clemson's Board of Trustees, at the College of Engineering's recommendation, voted to terminate the bachelors degree program in Engineering Technology as of August.

This particular curriculum enrolled seven percent of all undergraduates in the College of Engineering and was the tenth largest department at Clemson.

"The University had been deliberating and debating over the decision to drop the program for many months. It was finally decided that ending the program was in accordance with a long-range strategy for advancing the College of Engineering into a high national ranking," President Bill Atchley said. "We have been reviewing all the possibilities available to us, and we have tried to handle it professionally. We feel our mission is to provide the engineering program with every advantage in attaining the highest national prominence possible. We have achieved a great deal of recognition in some areas, and we have a commitment to help the College of Engineering reach its full potential," he added.

The idea of dropping the program was first conceived in 1982 after the fourth or fifth budget cut, according to the Dean of the College of Engineering, Charles Jennett. "Of course, a decision as great as this one was not made in a few days. You can't just decide to do away with something that will affect many people. But after the budget cuts we had to draw the line somewhere. We had to think of a solution to deal with the lack of funding," Jennett said.

Time seems to be another factor in fulfilling the mission of the Engineering Department. Jennett said that they hoped to be one of the top engineering programs in the country by Clemson's Centennial, 1989. This not only involves being excellent, but "it also involves everybody knowing that you're excellent," he said.

The Engineering Department wants visible excellence and to obtain this, money and space are needed. "So, we looked around and the only program we had which was nonengineering was Engineering Technology," Jennett said.

"In implementing the new ideas of the department, the program does not fit in because it is not actually an engineering discipline," he said. Engineering Technology has to do with the application of engineering, whereas the engineering field itself has a much broader scope and deals with the more intricate concepts and theories of the field. Jennett also said that regardless of what newspapers might say, the College of Engineering still has to depend on funds from research and gifts.

The space and resources freed by the termination of the department will be a great asset to the College of Engineering. It will free $300,000 a year in salaries and operating funds and 12,000 square feet of space to be used for its increasing high-priority programs in engineering.

Atchley said the $300,000 saved will be used to strengthen what are known as the "classic engineering disciplines" that are at the heart of the University's mission — areas like electrical, civil, agricultural, chemical, mechanical, and industrial engineering.

The program, however, will be phased out gradually. The University will fulfill its obligations totally to all students who enroll in the program as late as January 1985, with the last degree being awarded in May 1988, Atchley said.

This year began stage one of the department's phase out. All students in the program are being advised carefully about their curriculum to insure that they graduate at the appropriate time.

The general reaction of the engineering technology faculty was one of shock, but understanding. Ron Kopczyk, acting head of the department, said that the faculty cooperated fully and is trying to make the phase out over the next four years as smooth as possible.

"We all realize that Engineering Technology was not part of the overall mission of the College of Engineering. However, the faculty and staff felt they were offering a good program to students of South Carolina," Kopczyk said. The department had a substantial enrollment with graduating students getting excellent jobs. "It was definitely filling a need in the state as our engineering technology program was the only one fully accredited in the state," he said.

"There is a need which will not be filled in South Carolina unless some other institution picks up a four year program in Engineering Technology and has it fully accredited," he said. "Having an accredited program is an important aspect."

"Certainly, the termination is not a bad reflection on the Engineering Technology program," Jennett said. "It was a very good program. It was not that it was not profitable because it was," he said. "It is just one of those changes which have to be made for the sake of advancement in a modern world. We have to keep moving forward."

Challenging Careers Offered By the College of Engineering

By Betsy Decker

Engineering offers a challenging and financially rewarding career that can be practiced all over the world in a variety of working conditions.

Engineers develop and test products, processes, and systems. They follow a product or concept from the idea stage through its design, development, production, marketing, maintenance, and recycling.

In one sense, it's a state of mind or a way of thinking — an organized and logical way of solving problems. An engineering education provides basic principles of science and mathematical techniques, all presented in a logical fashion to be used in defining and solving real problems. Such an education prepares its graduates to perform well in advanced degree programs and to work well with other professionals in medicine, law, business, government, and education.

Because of its wide applicability and practicality, an engineering program also trains its graduates for company management positions. Our increasingly technological society needs managers who have a strong foundation in engineering and science so they can make beneficial, yet cost-effective decisions. Both government and businesses are now complex, and decision makers in both sectors must consider the overall impact of any decision on society. Many of tomorrow's effective managers will come from today's engineering graduates.

Engineering jobs pay well and are plentiful. Studies performed by the Engineering manpower Commission suggest a strong demand for engineers through the year 2000. Already the demand for engineers is twenty-five percent higher than the supply. This shortage will become more critical toward the end of the 1980's, driving salaries even higher.

The employment rate of engineering graduates is expected to continue far above the average rates for graduates from other fields. Engineering graduates now command about sixty percent of job offers in all fields even though the total number of engineering graduates amounts to less than ten percent of total graduates.

The Clemson University College of Engineering offers South Carolina and the region a principal and diverse base of engineering expertise. In light of a shortage of engineers, it is apparent that support for this resource base will become more significant.

The College of Engineering offers undergraduate degrees in nine engineering fields and in Engineering Technology. Eleven master's and nine doctorate programs strengthen the college for a deserved reputation as a sound technological base with which to meet the challenges of the Eighties. The areas include Agricultural Engineering, Bioengineering, Ceramic Engineering, Chemical Engineering, Civil Engineering, Computer Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Engineering Technology, Industrial Engineering, and Mechanical Engineering.

The complexity of graphics has this student perplexed.

Over 9,900 baccalaureate, 1,100 master's, and 148 doctorate degrees have been awarded. Annually, over sixty percent of all engineering technology graduates in the state receive their Bachelor of Science degrees from Clemson. Although this program is now being phased out of the college, the other engineering majors will continue to produce highly educated graduates to enter the working world.

Clemson Goes High-Tech

Who would have ever thought of Clemson being grouped with such prestigious schools as Stanford, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Rensselaer Polytechnical Institute, and Cornell. But last spring, Clemson, along with nine other schools including those listed above, became involved in a $1 million project to test the reliability of Very Large Integrated Circuits (VLSI). These VLSI silicon chips, which have one million logic gates within an area comparable to a drop of water, are used to guide industrial robots and complex weapons and missiles. VLSI are a part of the fifth-generation computers which are able to create artificial intelligence — the ability to learn, remember, and make decisions based upon memory.

On September 10, 1984, Clemson received the first of two electron microscopes funded by the Department of Defense. This microscope is imperative to the research of the integrated circuits as it can magnify up to 400 billion times. The electron microscope will mainly be used for analytical work in the chip such as defining its geometry and its detailed composition. It is presently housed in the basement of Jordon Hall. The other microscope, a high resolution piece, is to be delivered by the year's end.

The research is being conducted for and funded by Semi Conductor Research Corporation (SRC) located in the Research Triangle Park of North Carolina. SRC was formed by thirty-two prestigious firms including IBM, General Electric, and Texas Instruments. They felt that the research was vital to the industry in order to maintain an edge in this field after a Japanese threat of advancement.

The project involves testing the reliability of VLSI, but the research is not a form of "quality control" for the industry. It is basically studying the degradation of the chips and the factors leading to this degradation. According to Dr. J. W. Lathrop, who is heading the research, Clemson's main objective is the "identification and understanding of phenomena that might cause VLSI devices to fail at a greater rate than their less dense counterparts."

This information will assist

All Photos by Scott Harke

Clemson in finding ways to minimize the failure rate to a level compatible with the industry average — less than ten per billion device hours.

The importance of the research involves the trade-off between complexity and reliability. In the future, higher complexity chips can not be developed unless their reliability can be increased. In order to understand the reliability attributes of integrated circuits, the physical, chemical, and metallurgical phenomena that can occur after the device is manufactured must be known. Three primary failure mechanisms were selected for Clemson to investigate: electromigration, electrostatic discharge, and voltage acceleration. Electromigration involves the movement of atoms in a metallic conductor upon the charge of a direct current; electrostatic discharge effects are produced by extreme stress conditions; finally, voltage acceleration occurs when the temperature of the device is raised. Clemson's task involves examining each of these areas to determine their effect on the VLSI chips.

The four Electrical and Computer Engineering faculty members involved with the project are Dr. Lathrop, Dr. Michael Bridgwood, Dr. D. J. Dumin, and Dr. J. W. Harrison.

This project will give students and faculty the latest VLSI technology without the complicating fabrication of actually making the chip, as well as put Clemson on the map of the $8 billion microelectronics industry.

College of Sciences Opens Doors To Various Fields

By Lyndall Lee and Amy Holm

The College of Sciences at Clemson University consists of seven departments: Biology Program, Biological Sciences, Chemistry and Geology, Computer Sciences, Mathematical Sciences, Microbiology, and Physics and Astronomy. The college also has advisors for students with professional endeavors. Pre-medicine, pre-dentistry, and pre-pharmacy are all advised by Dr. Kenneth Wagner. Pre-vet is advised by Dr. Gayle Noblet, and medical technology is coordinated by Mariette V. Ruppert, assistant professor. Any of the majors offered by the college can, with a graduate degree, lead to teaching or research at a college or industry.

The Biology program primarily coordinates freshman biology. This department also sponsors the majors of medical technology and the pre-professional programs. The department of biological sciences includes Biochemistry, Botany and Zoology. Botany majors can pursue a Bachelor of Science degree and a Master's degree, but Clemson does not offer a doctorate program in Botany. Besides being a stepping stone for professional health occupations, a major in this department can lead to jobs in nearly any industry and in numerous federal, state, and municipal government agencies ranging from museum work to a game or atmospheric commission.

Students majoring in Chemistry and Geology have a variety of options. Geology only offers a Bachelor of Science degree here at Clemson, so any graduate work would have to be taken elsewhere. Geologists are demanded by the U. S. Geological Survey and also by many oil companies. Students who receive a Bachelor of Science degree in Chemistry can continue their education at Clemson. Both a Master's program and a doctorate program are offered in this field. The chemical industry in South Carolina is one of the largest in the Southeast, and the demand for these graduates is strong. Careers in this field can be very rewarding financially as well as academically.

The Computer Science department provides a Bachelor of Science degree, and it is also a popular minor for students in other colleges. With the growing emphasis on computer knowledge, an education in this area can increase a student's chances of landing a better job. Approximately one-third of the graduates go into data processing for business, marketing, or management. About one-half go to work for computer companies such as IBM developing software. Many of the remaining graduates go on to graduate school or to government work.

in industry and government, and advanced mathematicians are necessary in scientific research. The curriculum was revised several years back to prepare students for the business world, and these graduates are in high demand by large corporations. The major is geared toward producing graduates for industry and other nontraditional careers; these graduates do not just teach.

The Microbiology department offers an education that is essential to many areas of research. Although most students are pre-med, graduates can find jobs in industry in quality control or as research assistants. Those interested in research or teaching must continue their education to the master's or doctorate level. Many Microbiology students, as well as those in Biochemistry and Zoology, are medical school hopefuls as Clemson does not offer a pre-med curriculum.

A firm background in Physics or Astronomy can lead in many directions. Opportunities in Physics range from research groups, the military, computer applications, to the aerospace industry. They are also trained in engineering which opens up further career paths. Astronomy majors often work for the government or government agencies performing research. With further education, teaching is also a possibility.

With all of these departments, the College of Sciences offers students a vast range of choices in the career hunt. The possibilities are endless, and are almost always highly rewarding both financially and personally.

New Building to Accommodate Departmental Growth

By Meg Pridemore

Expressing his belief that prosperity depends on formal scientific education, Founder Thomas Green Clemson stated, "My purpose is to establish a college . . . which will afford thorough instruction in agriculture and natural sciences . . . and combine physical and intellectual education." Considering that fifty-five percent of the entering students were required to take chemistry, education in the department has remained significant. As the chemistry department adjusted to expansion, the foresight of Thomas Green Clemson was yet to be recognized.

The chemistry program has been one of a tradition of growth and outgrowth. Amazingly enough, expansion of the first chemistry building occurred within ten years of the opening, and a second addition was later required. Yet, the twice-expanded Hardin Hall could not meet the needs of increased enrollment and faculty research. The result was a new facility, Brackett Hall, which was completed in 1951. By this time, the program included both baccalaureate and master's degrees. In 1965, growth in enrollment, partly due to the addition of the first of three doctoral programs brought about a major addition to Brackett Hall. The needs of the chemistry program were satisfied for the time being; however, in response to growth in enrollment and technological advancement, a study revealed the possible renovation of Brackett Hall to be financially impractical, and ninety-four years after the completion of the first chemistry building, the ground was broken for the new chemistry building.

Situated behind Sistine Hall, the modern triangular building was designed to efficiently enclose the presently needed spaces, while its flexible modular lab plan allows future changes or growth to occur at minimal cost. Construction of two of the three proposed structures has begun, while a third facility to accommodate growth will be built later. Meanwhile, the main laboratory building and a separate 250 seat triangular-shaped auditorium is scheduled for completion in fall of 1986.

The new building proposal was a reaction to the changes and growth of the chemistry department. As a focus on technology became increasingly important, the role of chemistry continued to be significant, reinforcing Thomas Green Clemson's belief in formal scientific education.

OPPORTUNITIES

Architecture Students Design Their Own Future

By Meg Pridemore

While opportunities in some fields are obvious, many careers are less apparent. Students enrolled in the college of Architecture recognize the diversity of the opportunities available with their degrees.

Whether the major is Design, City and Regional Planning, Building Science and Management, or Visual Arts, students are not limited to specific careers.

Perhaps the most popular majors are the Bachelor of Art and the Bachelor of Science in Design. The more obvious opportunities in this field are the private practice and firm practice of architecture. Although a degree is earned in four years, architects have to spend some years under apprenticeship before taking a registration exam to be a licensed architect. Some students opt to spend some of their apprenticeship years continuing their education. A six year program is sometimes a specialization in health care facilities where the student deals primarily with hospitals and nursing homes. As in many majors, teaching is an opportunity not to be ignored. Another design-related major is that of City and Regional Planning.

Providing another focus is the six year program of Planning. Often referred to as Land Use Planning, the major requires students to deal with spaces including more than a single building. For students interested in other aspects of life,

Planning can deal specifically with public safety and recreation which includes social service buildings and parks. Designing transportation systems through urban spaces is an additional consideration for Planning majors. The scope of this major is broad and allows students freedom in choosing their careers. Long range opportunities are available to design students while the Building Science student can begin his career after four, rather than six, years of school.

The Building Science department offers opportunities in several directions. Other than the basic construction field, the major qualifies the student (after a registered exam) to be a building contractor who oversees construction. In many instances, the building science student becomes the construction or sight manager making the construction process run smoothly while giving special attention to economy. All of the openings are interrelated, yet the students are able to choose a specific direction in their careers. As in the other majors in the college, teaching is an option for Building Science majors and also for visual arts students.

The History and Visual Arts Department offers the most diversified opportunities. No degree can be earned in the history department as of yet, however, a student can study primarily architectural history. Whether the focus is on painting, sculpture, photography, print-making, or ceramics, each specialization allows for many career options. One preference may be in the professional route while another alternative is commercial design and art. In addition, a Visual Arts graduate might do commission work in the case where a specific project is requested. Over and above these openings are those in the Interior Design area and Art Administration. Opportunities in this department are from a wide range of which only a few are apparent to students outside the college.

Diversity characterizes the option available to the student enrolled in the College of Architecture. Freedom of direction rather than specific careers is the students' privilege. To apply the knowledge and skills acquired in college, students evaluate the opportunities available to them with respect to personal goals and preferences and lifelong pursuits.

PROSTHESIS

A Bioengineering Breakthrough

By Sandra Lynn Hawkins

The Bioengineering Department has made some remarkable contributions to our society in the past, but in October of this year, it became involved in a truly fascinating project.

A young music teacher in the Greenville County public school system lost one of his fingertips in a water skiing accident last summer. Since the accident occurred in water, the lost tip was not recovered thereby making reattachment out of the question. While the remaining part of the finger recovered from the accident, it was discovered that the root of the nail did not die; consequently, a nail began to grow over the top of the remaining portion of his finger. Once the injury was completely healed, the music teacher began to teach himself how to once again play the violin — his main music interest — without the use of his one finger. Eventually he learned how to play as beautifully as before, although the accident still left a disturbing scar. Without the use of that one finger, the man was unable to teach his music students the normal, correct method of violin playing. Plastic surgery was not feasible because of the missing fingertip so another alternative had to be found.

Through consultation with several physicians, the violinist discovered the research that was being conducted at Clemson by Dr. Francis W. Cook, professor of Bioengineering. A solution to the teacher's problem was found in a prosthesis fingertip created by Dr. Cook and Dr. William E. Gustafson, DDS, who practices general dentistry here in Clemson.

Dr. Cook composed the artificial tip from a medical-grade rubber that had gone through a two day vulcanizing process. It is the same type of rubber used in many cosmetic appliances such as nose, chin, and breast reconstructions. Dr. Gustafson created the mold for the tip from one of the violinist's other fingertips. Dentists are known for their ability to mold various substances, and Dr. Gustafson, in particular, does a magnificent job in this area.

The prosthesis, a thimble-like structure, fits directly on the finger, similar to a thimble. It was not made to resemble a finger, and there is no nail. Its primary purpose is to assist the man in playing the violin. While it has greatly improved the violinist's teaching and playing ability, it has several drawbacks. First, the rubber is too sticky. It is not slippery enough to slide correctly over the violin strings. Secondly, the prosthesis comes off too easily. Since it is not attached surgically, it must rely on a firm, snug fit. Finally, it has a limited life.

Dr. Cook is currently working on a new tip to replace the original one. He is planning to combine the thimble-like piece with an instrument resembling a guitar pick. The new piece will be softer, more slippery, and hopefully more practical. The ideal structure will need a lubricating film on the surface, and it will also need some type of arrangement for repairs.

The research was conducted solely by Dr. Cook and Dr. Gustafson at both the bioengineering department and the dentist's office. It was a gratis public service project, done mostly after regular working hours. Dr. Cook said the initial attachment was "a very emotional moment for the man." While at the dentist's office, the music instructor played a few scales on his violin for the doctors, but later he revealed that his music sounded much better when he practiced in the privacy of his own home. When asked about compensation for his services, Dr. Cook replied, "It was all done for fun, but I hope I do get some free tickets to a violin concert!"

Dr. Cook received his undergraduate degree in metallurgy from the University of Notre Dame. From there he worked on the Civilian Nuclear Reactor Power Program at Oak Ridge, Tennessee. He received his doctorate in Material Science in 1965 from Rensselaer Polytechnical Institute in Troy, New York. Before coming to Clemson in 1971, Dr. Cook worked at the Franklin Institute Research laboratory in Philadelphia, a non-profit organization. At the Franklin Institute, he studied Air Force brittle materials. He became particularly interested in the study of bone as a brittle material, and eventually Cook switched all of his interests to medical and surgical application materials. His decision to move to Clemson focused on the strong new program developing here in that particular field. Dr. Cook has enjoyed his tenure at Clemson, and he hopes to continue contributing his knowledge to the Bioengineering Department.

International Students Bring Culture to Campus

By Ajay Kumar Desai and Sandra Lynn Hawkins.

While most students look forward to free weekends to travel home to see their parents and friends and fill up on mom's cooking, an increasing percentage of Clemson's population cannot enjoy this privilege. These are the international students, and many of them rarely go home during their tenure at college.

Approximately 500 students are currently enrolled from overseas with seventy percent of them attending graduate school although 110 of these students are freshmen. This shows the dramatic increase in Clemson's popularity to foreign students.

Eighty different countries are represented here including such remote islands as Fiji and Sri Lanka. One-fifth of the international students are from Tehran and China with another large majority being from India. Other students come from South America, Europe, Asia, and Africa.

The majority of international students, eighty percent, attend Clemson for its prestigious College of Engineering while most of the remaining twenty percent major in some form of business. According to Otis D. Nelson, International Student Advisor, future increases in Computer Science majors are expected.

Foreign students compete vigorously for acceptance here at Clemson. Enrollment standards are much stricter for them due to the responsibility a college accepts with international students. Academic as well as financial requirements must be met, and the student must also express a proficiency in the English language by passing the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). These stricter requirements make the withdrawal rate extremely low for foreign students.

The influx of students from overseas has brought many positive values to our campus. Their diligence and unequalled study habits have enhanced our academic reputation. Also, many cultural ideas are exchanged, and the education of the American students is broadened from the exposure to lifestyles that are different from their own.

Job opportunities more promising for Liberal Arts grads

By Evelyn Gora

All Photos by Bill Spitzer

It's a fatal course of action, or so some think. Those in the Liberal Arts curriculum are becoming more concerned about their fate, and this has caused a decline in liberal arts around the country. One university administrator relates a common situation in Rolling Stone magazine, "I say to little Elmer, 'What do you want to do?' and his father answers, 'computers.'" Today's parents are making strict rules about telling their children what to study. Many students believe they can't study such a general area. What can I do with a humanities degree?

Some students think double-majoring is the best strategy to study the intellectual aspect of psychology and the learning ability of a science or business. At Clemson you can get the best of both. In the morning, you can learn how to program a computer and in the afternoon learn the effects it has on society. The overall scope of liberal arts is so broad that you can combine diverse groups of fields. The limit to the opportunity is set only by the person's talent, imagination, and creativity. "The way a person packages themselves determines how marketable they are," says Robert Waller, Dean of Liberal Arts. It also helps if students try to specialize in one area rather than in several. Foreign language education will be in demand shortly in South Carolina because of a two year language requirement which will be placed on every high school student entering college.

In the endless quest for success and security, college becomes a stepping stone for those who enter graduate school.

Companies are beginning to open new doors. Over twenty percent of the workers General Motors hires are Liberal Arts majors. According to Roger Smith of General Motors, "Business is not so much the movement of products as it is the relationship of human beings." Liberal Arts students show creativity, interpersonal skills, and most importantly, communication skills. Finally Mr. Smith explains, "They're successful not because they did or did not major in philosophy or French, but because they've had the wit and the resources to absorb what they've been taught and to employ it in an imaginative and creative way."

LANGUAGE HOUSE

Fun is the Universal Dialect Spoken Here

By Leigh Wright and Margaret Carmicheal

Peacefully situated atop of the hill across the street from Thornhill Village on Highway 93, there sits a two story white house. At first glance, one might not notice anything unusual or out of the ordinary about this house. However, upon entering the front door, one soon discovers the "hidden secret" behind this seemingly tranquil structure. This house is commonly referred to as the Language House.

According to French professor Jacques Macy, who is in charge of it, the house has been standing there between forty and fifty years. The house has always been the property of the University, however, the Language department just recently started using it in the past four years. Prior to using the house, the department used the small house across from Redfern Health Center that has since become the Counseling Center.

The house is fully furnished inside, just like an ordinary house. As the result of an agreement that has been arranged with Duke Power Company, every February Duke Power furnishes the house with a new refrigerator and stove, and they remove the old appliances to be sold.

The Language House, which is reserved through the Language department or Dr. Macy, is the meeting place for a wide variety of groups. In addition to being used by the language clubs (English, Spanish, French, German, and Russian), the house is used by other organizations such as the International Students, ROTC, AFROTC, Arnold Air Society, Architecture Club, Physics Club, and several honor fraternities.

Once inside the house there are all kinds of surprises that lie in store for one to experience. On almost any given day, one can find things such as class projects, plays, speakers, or videos and slide shows. Sometimes there are clubs having parties that correspond to the holidays (Christmas, Valentine's Day, Halloween, Mardi Gras, and Oktoberfest). Other language clubs have cultural events such as dinners and songs and dances. In addition to these fun and games, the honor fraternities also hold their induction ceremonies at the house.

The next time you notice how the language House sits so calmly and quietly atop of the hill, remember that it is an unknown and therefore "hidden secret," but it is just waiting to share its laughter and good times with you.

Thurmond Institute to provide cultural awareness

By Sandra L. Hawkins

When Senator Strom Thurmond announced his decision to place his public papers and memorabilia at his alma mater, the people of Clemson and the state of South Carolina became the future recipients of what promised to become a wealth of cultural and civic opportunity. The announcement came on October 29, 1981, and although the completion of the Strom Thurmond Institute for Excellence in Government and Public Service was not scheduled until 1986, the Center had already begun to contribute to the cultural improvement of the University.

The underlying theme of the programs sponsored by the Institute would be public service. Programs in civic education, continuing education, and cultural education were already underway. The Institute Lecture Series, one of the six primary programs, already had prominent speakers address the campus. Speakers included Richard DeLauer, Under Secretary of Defense, Reverend Jesse Jackson, Earl Butts, Former Secretary of Agriculture, and Nancy Stewart, Chairman of the Consumer Products Safety Commission.

The entire Thurmond Center, which consists of three major facilities, is expected to cost $25 million with $6.7 million of these funds going towards providing the campus with an auditorium facility. Unlike any other auditorium in the entire region, it will be directed toward cultural programs such as symposia, lecture series, and musical and dramatic performances.

The second major facility planned is the $2.6 million Strom Thurmond Institute. This part of the center has already been compared to the Kennedy School at Harvard and the Hoover Institution at Stanford. The Institute will direct its attention to citizenship education through improving the community's sense of civic duty. It is in this part of the center that the Thurmond Collection of papers will be kept. His collection will be displayed in the Institute, and computer access to similar collections is also planned.

Phase II of construction will focus on completion of the third building of Continuing Education. This $10.7 million project will offer meeting facilities for the increasing demand for professional and technical personnel who visit Clemson annually from various parts of the country.

The Thurmond Center plans to have six primary programs, all endowed at $5 million. The first program, The Thurmond Seminars in Government and Politics, is scheduled to invite school teachers and other professionals to the campus during the summer months for a variety of courses in government studies and politics. The objective of these seminars is to educate the participants to better voice their opinions and give information in today's political arena. This program is scheduled to begin in Phase I of the center's construction.

The Institute Adjunct Professorship Program is designed to enhance the lecture Series by involving many of the same public figures. These individuals will be invited to Clemson for brief periods to teach, write, conduct research, or just relax. They will also participate in classroom lectures.

The final program, The Institute Governmental Research Program, will coordinate public service research effort in the fields of political science, architecture, economics, computer science, engineering, agricultural sciences, and management. Clemson professors and researchers will assist in the program by offering expertise in their personal fields.

The Strom Thurmond Center for Excellence in Government and Public Service plans to be in full operation by the time Clemson celebrates its Centennial in 1989. Funds for the project are being raised by Founder's of the Strom Thurmond Center, Inc., in cooperation with the Clemson University Centennial Fund Campaign.

There is More to Education Than Teaching

By Lydia L. Caddell

In the past few years, education has become an exciting major to be involved with. Jobs that were once scarce are becoming plentiful, and education majors have a lot to look forward to and to be proud of.

This past year, for example, the Governor's Education Package was passed in South Carolina. This package was one of the most praised in the country. This two million dollar plan raised the sales tax in South Carolina from four to five cents. The extra penny went to upgrade student education. One of the strong points of this package was a $2,000 pay raise for all teachers to keep teacher's salaries up with the South Eastern United States average. This pay increase was needed to keep teachers in the classroom and away from higher salaries in business and industry.

Education graduates do not always teach in a classroom. Many work as administrators, guidance counselors, and supervisors in the school system. These positions usually require some classroom experience, however, and some graduate level study.

Secondary Education majors who concentrate their study in a foreign language often find work with an international firm as sales person, interpreters, editors, or in management. These companies have a need for workers who speak the language of their clients.

Education majors in English are often employed by magazines and newspapers as editors and writers. Textbook companies also hire education majors as editors, authors, and consultants.

Science and Math Education graduates are hard to keep in the classroom. Business and industry firms feel that this degree holds a diversified educational background.

Also, physical education graduates are not limited to coaching in the school system. Many conduct private lessons in such sports as swimming and tennis. Spas, health clubs, and summer camps also hire these students because of their knowledge of physical fitness and their ability to work well with people.

Education is changing for the better in South Carolina as well as around the country, and classroom teachers have a bright future ahead. If the classroom is not where they want to be however, the other options are numerous. With hard work and determination, the rewards can be numerous.

CU vs. ACC

Comparison of Schools Shows Clemson Average

By Tara L. Huffman

Compared to other universities in the ACC, Clemson is average. In comparing Clemson's student body size, tuition, academics, acceptance percentage, and social life with Maryland, North Carolina State, Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia Tech, Duke and Wake Forest, the Tigers fall in the median range. Maryland is the largest of the eight schools with an undergraduate enrollment of 37,530. Wake Forest is the smallest with 4,575 undergraduates. Clemson comes in fifth with an undergraduate enrollment of 11,620.

Tuition varies greatly depending on whether or not the institution is state supported. Duke and Wake Forest are private and are therefore the most expensive. Their in-state and out-of-state costs are the same, while at state supported universities the two costs vary. The biggest difference is found at Georgia Tech which has in-state tuition fees of $1,401 yearly and out-of-state fees of $4,161.

Academics at these universities, based on SAT scores, range from a score of 970 at Maryland to 1285 at Duke. On an academic scale of one to five, five being the highest standard, N. C. State has the lowest score of two, Clemson has an average score of three, and Duke and Virginia have the highest score of five.

Acceptance percentages are lowest at Virginia, Duke, and Wake Forest. This is not unusual since these schools have the highest SAT score requirements. Maryland is the easiest of the schools to be accepted into with a sixty-five percent acceptance rate. Again, Clemson is average with a fifty-two acceptance rate percentage.

In social life, last but by no means least, Clemson comes in second. The University of Virginia is first and Georgia Tech is last. On a scale of one to five, Clemson's social life receives a four while the quality of life also receives a four. There is always something for students to do at Clemson, from parties to movies to bowling to highly spirited athletic events.

Looking at all the facts, it is not hard to understand why Clemson has such spirit and atmosphere. Being so well-rounded is the biggest plus for Clemson. There is a major for every one with sixty-five undergraduate and eighty-one graduate programs offered. Tuition and entrance requirements are reasonable, and Clemson is still small enough to give its students a sense of individuality. And of course social life is tops. With all of these pluses, how can Clemson be anything less than great?

Forestry and PRTM Majors More Optimistic Than Ever

By Dana Smith

The Department of Forestry and Recreation Resources offers many opportunities to students. There are many different emphasis areas within the department which are available for almost every line of interest related to this field. Two bachelor degrees are offered — Forest Management and Wood Utilization.

Wood Utilization includes the chemical breaking down of wood after it has been cut to use as Rayon or dissolved to make plastic and paper nineteen percent of the forestry graduates specialize in wood procurement and work for pulp mills and sawmills. They also work to produce such products as poles, pilings, cross ties, and other wood products. These graduates sometimes use their marketing skills to buy wood from the land owners to sell to mills since mills only produce one-third of their needed wood supply. Wood procurement specialists must provide services for getting wood from private land owners. They must also be able to bid against others, know how much the wood will cost to get it out of the forest, and how much it will be worth to the company so that no money loss will occur within the company.

Forest Management offers the largest employment for forestry students. Graduates in Forest Management must be aware of how much timber is available in a forest as well as what condition it is in. They must be conscious of diseases caused by insects and have some knowledge for the protection against forest fires. Forest Management is broken down into groups such as Land Management and Land Owner Assistants.

Of the forestry students, thirty-six percent specialize in Land Management with twenty-five percent working with industrial forests, ten percent working in cooperation with federal agencies such as the U.S. Forestry Service, and nineteen percent working with state forestry services. Land Management includes the use of controlled fire to reduce the undergrowth that may fuel hazardous forest fires.

Land Owner Assistants occupy forty-five percent of the forestry graduates, and they specialize in helping with forestry problems. Twenty-three percent work with state agencies like the State Forest Commission or are employed as County agents. The other twenty percent work as private forestry consultants. These people work on a part-time basis for larger private land owners.

Closely related to the department of Forestry and Recreation Resources is the department of Parks, Recreation, and Tourism Management which includes four emphasis areas — Community Leisure Service, Therapeutic Recreation, Resource Management, and Travel and Tourism Management.

Community Leisure Service offers such opportunities as working with various community recreation centers and planning and organizing recreation activities for playgrounds or special community events. Courses in commercial law, park maintenance and operation, and commercial recreation are a few of the mandatory courses required in this emphasis area.

Therapeutic Recreation strives to extend leisure services to the disabled. It involves trying to boost self-esteem for the handicapped and offer a closed gap between the handicapped and the community. Jobs in this field include working in mental hospitals, organizing special events such as the Special Olympics, and directly working with government legislation for the improvement of facilities for the handicapped.

Resource Management is closely related to the forestry department in that a person in this field must complete such courses as Soils and Land Use and Introductory Plant Taxonomy. Resource Management includes knowing information about wilderness areas and land utilization, and must be able to give an interpretation of the surrounding resources to the public.

Travel and Tourism Management is the newest and fastest growing emphasis area in the field of Parks, Recreation, and Tourism Management. Group sales, marketing, and management operations are a few of the programs offered in this area, and positions are available for operations, research, and education in both public and private areas. Graduate work may lead to either the Professional Master's Degree or the Master of Science. Job opportunities for Travel and Tourism students include working with tour companies, travel agencies, and other related positions.

Each emphasis area requires students to obtain specific position skills through required field training assignments and special work projects. Both the Forestry and Recreation Resources department and the Parks, Recreation, and Tourism Management department demonstrate a tough curriculum, high expectations, and a highly competitive career field. And, for those students who make it through college, these career offerings can invest both financial and personal gratification.

Dairy Science Professor Receives Award

By Jill Slye

"Pleased, honored, humbled, and grateful to my family for this tolerance and to my students for their choice," was Dr. Joseph F. Dickey's response to being endowed with the Master Teacher Award. Selected by the Student Alumni Council and sponsored by alumni, Dr. Dickey received a $1,500 check and a plaque at the May commencement. However, to Dickey, the true award was neither the check nor the plaque, but "the student part."

Aside from coaching a YMCA junior high school basketball team, being involved in Christian education programs, and preparing for class between 10:00 p.m. and 2:00 a.m. every night, Dickey always found time to be accessible to his students. "I try to stay available around the building or my office," he said. "In addition to teaching two junior-or-senior level courses and one graduate course. I enjoy working with people, and students are generally classified as people."

For Dickey, the student is the main focus of attention. Dedicating most of his work to classroom teaching, Dickey noted, "My greatest motivation is to make each student feel he is an individual and as important as any person in that class."

In the Dairy Science Department, the door to Joe Dickey's office is always open to his students.

Although his position requires some research, Dr. Dickey prefers the teaching aspect of being a college professor.

In the beginning of each semester, Dickey had photos made of each student in order to get to know them better. In addition, he scheduled a conference with each student early in the semester to discuss possible goals and sign "the learning contract." This was in order for "the student to consciously make the grade decision and have a system that shows him what it will take to achieve success in winning the grade he chooses."

Throughout the semester, Dickey constantly aided his students and helped them learn for themselves. Students, therefore, not only found the course to be rewarding, but a comfortable atmosphere where they could receive outside help and "the feeling that the professor really liked the student and enjoyed his job."

Dickey's teaching consistently paid off. Employers of Dickey's former students noted that they are "dedicated to the profession and greatly concerned not only with their own career development, but most importantly, with making serious and lasting contributions to the field."

Joe Dickey has been at Clemson for nineteen years, and during these years he had greatly aided in the animal physiology program and became involved in the American Dairy Science Association and American Society of Animal Science. However, his most important contribution had been his involvement with students at the University. Dedicating as much time as possible, added with true care and concern, has proved Dickey to be a "leader of learners." "Learning is the important thing, and to my surprise, I liked it."

To Dickey, his main source of self-satisfaction came from aiding his students and seeing that they made progress. "The thing I get the most pleasure from is helping . . . that, to me, is satisfying."

Perhaps one student summed up Dickey and his course best in saying, "I have put more work into this course than any others and got a substantial education in return." To Dickey, being the ideal teacher for students, that's what learning is all about.

Agriculture Goes Beyond Farming Limits

By Leslie Williams

Agriculture is far more than the production of crops and livestock on a farm. Modern agriculture involves the science, business, and art of producing, processing, and distributing plant and animal products. It also includes economics and human relations associated with these activities. Agriculture is the heart behind the American people. Its individuals are involved in diverse and dynamic agricultural positions in business, communications, science, government services, education, production, processing, and marketing.

A common misconception is that there is no place in agriculture for those who do not come from a farm. This is not true. Nearly fifty percent of the students studying agriculture do not come from farms. Yet, they will enter important, rewarding careers in agriculture. They will find a place in the science and big business of modern agriculture.

The College of Agricultural Sciences currently offers eight Bachelor of Sciences majors, two of which are jointly administered with other colleges: Agricultural Education with the College of Education and Agricultural Engineering with the College of Engineering. Within these eight degree majors, a student may select one of sixteen curricula as follows: Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology with curricula in Agricultural Industries and Community and Rural Development; Agricultural Education; Agricultural Engineering; Agricultural Mechanization and Business; Animal Industries with curricula in Animal Science, Dairy Science, and Poultry Science; Economic Biology with curricula in Economic Zoology, Entomology, and Plant Pathology; Food Science; and Plant Sciences with a curricula in Agronomy and three curricula in Horticulture: Fruit and Vegetable, Ornamental, and Turfgrass.

A college degree in any of these majors will open many career doors. While some careers require training in a specific field of study, other opportunities are available to graduates in various fields. Some graduates pursue farming or are hired by farm owners to manage the land. Those employed by government agencies work directly with farmers helping them to develop the best soil conservation methods. They also inspect crops or livestock for pests and diseases or for contamination from toxic chemicals such as insecticides or herbicides. Other graduates who wish to work directly with farmers can become involved in the sale of agricultural chemicals, feeds, equipment, and similar items. These sales positions do not merely entail selling, but require providing technical advice to the farmer.

There are also opportunities in both marketing and agricultural finance. These graduates become meat, produce, or grain buyers for large companies. Others might work for a bank or credit agency helping farmers and other agricultural businesses establish solid business and credit practices. Excellent opportunities also exist in food processing and packaging. These involve both laboratory research and work in sophisticated processing plants. These graduates work in research, food packaging, and quality control for all kinds of food products.

The ability of American agriculture to continue to provide ample supplies of food, fiber, and forest products depends upon many physical and human variables. Present agricultural abundance resulting in the temporary surpluses that we are presently enjoying clouds the fact that producing an adequate supply of food is never guaranteed. Thousands of agricultural graduates are needed annually. At present our colleges and universities are graduating less than the number demanded to fill the numerous careers. There is a place in agriculture for people who want a future, a challenge, and service to mankind.

VISITOR'S CENTER

The front door to campus

By Thad Cloer

After several years of planning and organizing, the new Visitor's Center opened in June. Visitor's to the campus who needed information on tours, famous sites, or campus events could now go to Room 103 in Tillman Hall. "We want the center to be the front door to the campus," says John Allen, director of visitor programs, "and we want it known that our door is always open."

Originally funded equally by the National Alumni Council and Blue Key Honor Society, the center is now a part of the University's public relations department.

Staffing the center are two full time employees — Janet Moore, manager, and Joy Skelton, assistant manager, both alumni. Several student volunteers also help part-time with operations of the center.

Inside the plushly furnished Visitor's Center are many information sources. There is a viewing room for showing films of campus related topics. In the future, Ms. Moore hopes to add videocassettes for all nine colleges. Also in the center is a television screen where, with the push of a button, one can have local weather, campus events for the day, and a lot of other current information. Ms. Moore is also planning the addition of a permanent wall display telling the Clemson story. The plan is to visually present the material to the visitors.

Campus tours conducted by volunteer students and the professional staff originate at the center and cover all of Clemson's many landmarks, including the John C. Calhoun Mansion and the Hanover House.

Other tours available include visits to Memorial Stadium, the largest college football facility east of the Mississippi, and the 70 acres of ornamental flowers and gardens that make up the beautiful horticulture gardens.

Self guided audio-cassette tours are also provided by the Visitor's Center, as well as specialized group tours of Calhoun Mansion and Hanover House.

According to Moore, an average of almost 300 people visit the center each week. About 80% of these visitors are prospective students and the other 20% are made up of groups of young children or retired people seeking tours. The visitors come from all over the United States and the world. "Every visitor represents a new opportunity to let people know about the University and what it means to South Carolina and this region," Allen said.

Indeed, the Visitor's Center worked closely with the Chamber of Commerce, the Keowee-Toxaway Center, and other area sites, thus serving not only Clemson, but also South Carolina's upstate.

A good example of this is the Campus Information line, 656-INFO, for the public's use in keeping up with campus events.

Future expansion of the Visitor's Center includes a language bank staffed by faculty translators and a Speakers Bureau. Also, Ms. Moore is hoping to obtain a tour bus for use by the center.

Preparing for a Variety of Health Services

By Mary Anne Funderburk

While some majors are merely a stepping stone for continuing one's education, as for those going on to graduate, medical, or veterinary school, other majors, such as nursing, prepare its followers for immediate employment. The College of Nursing prepares the student for a variety of services to the public. During the course of study the content of the curriculum focuses on five areas of nursing. These are medical/surgical nursing, psychiatric nursing, pediatrics and obstetrics, maternal/infant nursing and community health nursing.

Upon graduation from the College of Nursing, the graduate is qualified to work in any of the five areas of nursing. While the majority of graduates are employed in hospitals, other areas of employment are clinics, doctor's offices and community health centers. In the last few years, with the rising cost of in-hospital nursing care, there has been an increase in the need for community health nurses. Clemson's program is geared toward this need in providing a well rounded program in community health nursing.

Some students opt to further their education by specializing in one of the five nursing fields. For a M.S. degree one to two years of study are necessary depending on the area of specialization. Further study would consist of a Ph.D in nursing. At present, Clemson's College of Nursing does not offer this program although it does offer an M.S.

Employment percentages after graduation are remarkable. In 1982, of all the baccalaureate programs in the U.S., 96.7% of graduates were employed six to eight months after licensure in the nursing field. Of those not employed, 14.4% was due to jobs not being available and 10.9% due to the desired jobs not being available. A census conducted by Clemson's College of Nursing concerning the employment of 1983 nursing graduates showed that 98.8% were employed with a salary range between $15,000 and $29,000.

The nursing field is complex with many subsets to explore. It is a dynamic profession that is constantly changing in order to accommodate and meet the needs of the public it serves.

Clemson questions who's in charge

By Suzanne M. Fort

"I'm President until July 1, and if anyone doesn't think so, they better not try me" proclaimed President Bill Atchley to a crowd of approximately 2,069 students who swarmed the steps of Sikes Hall after an hour-long rally in his support. The rally, which was held in the student union plaza and proceeded to move in a peaceful, unified procession to Sikes, received the support and enthusiasm of students, faculty, and administrators alike. The media was widespread, both local and national. Student speakers included Oran Smith, Ray Workman, Pam Sheppard, and Danny Pechthalt, who organized the rally. The demonstration was a great success and proved Clemson students to be not as apathetic as past history has shown.

This sudden burst of voiced student concern and enthusiasm came as a result of the March 1, 1985, "resignation" of University President Bill Atchley. Atchley, who has served as President since July 1, 1979, announced his resignation after an eight-hour meeting with the University's Board of Trustees. Before handing in his resignation, Atchley demanded a vote of confidence for him and his administration from the Board and anything short would have Clemson being perceived as placing athletics above academics. Athletic Director Bill McLellan then announced his resignation minutes after Atchley released his statement.

The Atchley-McLellan controversy came to a head with the athletic drug investigation. However, two years previous, Atchley and McLellan were at odds over the placement of the football program on NCAA and ACC probation. Atchley had reorganizing plans for the athletic department; however, the Board of Trustees would not allow for the restructuring of the athletic department as Atchley requested. This controversy initiated what many considered the Board of Trustee's emphasis of "athletics over academics."

The resignation and indictment on drug charges of three athletic coaches renewed the debate concerning the internal workings of the athletic department. The State published an investigative report on February 24, 1985, which set forth the proposition that Dr. Atchley's future was in question. The following week rumors flew — Atchley was out, McLellan was gone, both would be asked to step down. March 1, 1985, terminated the rumors with the official resignations of both men. Atchley's resignation will be effective as of July 1, 1985. McLellan, although no longer Athletic Director, will "assume other college duties" here at Clemson.

The Student Senate and Faculty Senate both gave President Bill Atchley their votes of confidence; however, the Board of Trustees did not. Atchley stated, before handling in his resignation to the Trustees "I believe that my departure anytime before at least a year to 18 months will involve Clemson in a controversy that I don't think anyone in this room is prepared to contend with." Let's hope, for the sake of the University's academic reputation, that Dr. Atchley is wrong this time . . . for a change.

Commerce and Industry Provides Various Career Paths

By Sandra Ellmaker

What does a graduate of the College of Commerce and Industry do in the working world? Given that there are three schools within the college — Accounting, Business, and Textiles — many options exist. Information obtained through the campus placement office indicates good job opportunities after graduation. Below is a sample of the types of jobs that are available.

Graduates with a Bachelor of Science degree in Accounting may qualify for positions with such industries as banks, power, communications, and trucking companies, and auditors. There are also innumerable jobs in the private sector and in the government. Statistics show the average beginning salaries offered by such companies at approximately $17,000. Accounting graduates can also sit for the Certified Public Accountant (CPA) exam which is given at various times throughout the year. Certification in accounting qualifies a student to seek a career in public accounting with one of the Big-Eight firms.

Within the School of Business, there are four departments: Economics, Finance, Management, and Marketing. Every business, whether public, private, or non-profit, needs able people with these backgrounds; thus, the job market is large. Along with the forementioned possibilities, jobs are available with hotels, restaurants, food plants, and governmental agencies such as the CIA and the Census Bureau. Here, offered salaries range from $15,000 to $20,000.

The department of Finance is particularly well known in the Southeast. The department's fine reputation makes these graduates sought after by such prominent firms as NCNB, Bankers Trust, and Morgan Guarantee Trust Company of New York. Banks are interested in Finance graduates to prepare loan packages and assess clients' financial strengths and weaknesses. The Finance curriculum also prepares a student for opportunities in investment banking, and stock brokerage.

The School of Textiles offers four programs to undergraduates. They are Textile Chemistry, Textile Management, Textile Technology, and Textile Science. The job opportunities in South Carolina alone are great. The textile industry, chemical companies, material plants, and clothing manufacturers all provide positions. Graduates from this school are qualified to work in many areas of the industry including management, sales, research, marketing, and development. Approximate opening salaries are just over $20,000.

The prospects for graduates in the College of Commerce and Industry, as well as the varied career opportunities, are quite numerous. Even once a specific major is selected, the options for employment are not narrowed, providing a great deal of flexibility for the students in the college.

Clemson University has always prided themselves on their excellence in athletics. This tradition was carried on as the Tigers finished in the Top Ten in the nation for overall collegiate sports for the sixth time in seven years. The survey took into account the national rankings of ten selected male sports—football, soccer, basketball, tennis, baseball, wrestling, swimming, golf, track, and cross country.

It was a year when past records were shattered, new goals set, and those reords broken yet again. We proved we could be Number One in soccer when we defeated Indiana in Seattle for the 1984 NCAA National Championship. Furthermore, a new wave of basketball excitement was experienced as Cliff Ellis took over as head coach. We sat home, proudly watching our fellow classmates compete in the Olympic games. But most importantly, we overcame the many prejudices held against us and continued working diligently and being proud that we are Tigers.

Slugging it out against the rest.

By Richard M. Baldwin II

The 1984 Baseball Season may not have started out as well as one may have expected, but the team picked up a little glitter along the way. The team did have some weak points but an overall improvement over the 1983 season record of 30-20-1 was expected and that's just what they did in producing a record of 38 wins and 17 losses. Coach Wilhelm was hoping for solid hitting performance from the outfield. "We need to get solid hitting performances from the outfield," said Wilhelm, "We have a lot of new faces there this season and hopefully they'd come through for us. Overall we need to improve our defensive effort."

Another change taking place was in the pitching staff which has a strong standing rotation of not only one star but four good starters. Returning leaders from last year's team included All-

ACC catcher Jim McCollum who is considered to be the strongest hitter on the team. Two sport All-ACC performer Bob Paulling, will be on first base. He also has been a placekicker for the Clemson football team. The season began for the Tigers in late February. Where they traveled to Georgia Southern to play the opening three game series in the near-freezing temperatures. The team lost the first game of the series, 11-7, but won the last two games. Next the Tigers moved on to Ball State here at Clemson in another three game series. This time the Tigers lost the first two games and won the last one. Leaving Clemson with a 3-3 record at the end of February.

When March's warmer weather arrived in Clemson the baseball team seemed to perk up and take command of the baseball field. This was showed to us after splitting the series against Old Dominion 1-1. Clemson then took on the ACC foe Duke University. Playing in Durham, the Blue Devils fell two days straight with final scores of 11-4 and 7-1. Next, the Citadel entered Tiger Country for a doubleheader; Scott Parrish obtained his first no hitter for the series.

The Tigers remained at home winning most of their games. After Clemson defeated Maryland, the team was 4-0 in the ACC. The Tigers first traveled to Winston-Salem to defeat the Deacons 13-1, and then moved on to defeat North Carolina and lose to N.C. State 15-7. Still traveling the Tigers won a night game against Georgia Tech making their ACC record 11-2. Upon returning home Clemson defeated Wake Forest and tied for first in the ACC in regular season play.

The Tigers took two shutouts from Winthrop and Augusta as they got ready for the ACC Tournament. A regular season record of 33-14 would not aid the Tigers in the Conference Tournament; however Duke overcame the Tigers 8-5 in the first round, and the team then moved into Consolations. The Cavaliers bowed to the Tigers 7-6 followed by a 12-1 victory over Maryland. One game short of the finals, Clemson lost to North Carolina 6-7.

After the tournament, the Tigers continued on the road. After losing to Georgia in Athens, the Tigers brought the dawgs home to a 5-2 loss and finished up the home season with another win this time against Erskine.

Finishing off the season, the Tigers won their game 11-5 against Vanderbilt. After being beaten by Georgia 6-9, the Tigers redeemed themselves with three wins over Marshall achieving Coach Wilhelm's 700th victory at Clemson. Virginia was as unlucky as the other ACC teams were in Clemson. Before going on the road, Clemson hosted Virginia Tech, giving up one loss and taking two wins. Pitcher John Pawlowski threw for the shut-out, 8-0.

While on the road, the Tigers lost two out of three to Alabama, but won all three in Mississippi with the final game extending to eleven innings. Upon returning home, the team continued their ACC streak against Georgia Tech. It seemed as if the Tigers could do no wrong in the ACC. Against Florida State, Scott Parrish picked up his second no-hitter of the season with a final score of 13-0, and the Tigers picked up another win in the second game against Florida State.

Though the month of March was a good one for the Tigers, the last game of the month brought their first loss to a conference school — N.C. State 2-5.

April Fool's day did not prove to be any better as North Carolina handed the Tigers a 3-1 loss. Even though the month of April gave the ball players a lot of time on the road, they stuck in there.

Finishing off the 1984 season with a bang and even higher hopes of improving the 38-17 record next year.

Some final notes to be mentioned: Jim McColm hit 11 runs this season, giving him a career total of 31. This broke the school record of 27 set by Craig White. Brooke Shumake was successful in stealing 20 bases this season, giving him a career total of 71. He broke the school record set by Billy Weemsin 1977-78-79-80 of 68. Pitcher Scott Parrish has since turned pro and is now playing with the Oakland A's.

Coach Wilhelm coached his 1,000th Clemson game against Maryland in the ACC Tournament on April 20. In his twenty-seven years at Clemson Coach Wilhelm has never had a losing season and now has an overall record of 727-370-8

With six lettermen returning from last year's fifth-ranked team, expectations for another great season were high. This was the 44th year of golf at Clemson, and it had never before achieved the success seen in the last five years. First-year Head Coach Larry Penley replaced Bobby Robinson who stepped down to concentrate on administrative duties for the Clemson Athletic Department as Director of Athletic Programs. Penley, the Dallas, North Carolina native, was an outstanding golfer during high school and in his undergraduate years at Clemson.

Tough and challenging were two words that described the team's schedule which featured nine tournaments and included a dual meet with Duke University. But co-captains Norman Chapman and Dillard Pruitt bravely led the way.

The new golf coach christened his career with a 732-766 dual meet victory over Duke at the Dunes in Myrtle Beach. Next, Clemson hosted the initial Palmetto Dunes Invitational at Hilton Head on February 17. The Tigers bested seventeen other teams on their way to a fifteen-shot win over North Carolina. Three players finished in the top ten as Jim MacFie, John Trivison, and Charles Raulerson shot 863 for the tournament.

At Lakeland, Florida, the Tigers finished tenth in the twenty-team Invitational. Clemson improved the next week with a third place victory at the Palmetto Invitational.

Freshman Mike Taylor had a hole-in-one during the first round of the Iron Duke Classic, but the team could only hold on to the fourth. Jim MacFie, a junior, took second place at the Furman Invitational, and Wake Forest edged the Tigers 894-895. MacFie, at 217, was beaten by one shot.

The next week at the Tar Heel Invitational the team took second place by one shot. MacFie again helped them to a second place finish.

Then on April 20, in the ACC Championship at Pinehurst, the Tigers were in dead last after the first round but managed to regroup to a third-place finish with a 907 total. Pruitt and Chapman finished fourth and tenth, respectively.

ton, Texas, Clemson made a finish of nineteenth in the nation out of the thirty-two participating colleges.

Individually, the Tiger top five players' averages improved from the previous year — Dillard Pruitt 71.94, Jim MacFie 72.77, Norman Chapman 73.37, John Trivison 74.70, and Charles Raulerson 75.28. Together these men managed to help the team finish nineteenth in the nation.

Men's Tennis

The 1984 Tiger Tennis Team had an outstanding season winning the ACC tournament for the fourth time in the last five years and going undefeated in the conference. Despite a rigorous schedule, the Tigers comprised an overall record of 26-8, 7-0, in the ACC and finished the season ranked third in the nation. And again, for the sixth year in a row, Clemson was invited to participate in the NCAA Tournament located in Athens, Ga.

Solid and consistent performance was apparent throughout the season as Clemson never lost to a team not ranked in the top 20. In fact, eleventh ranked Auburn was the lowest ranked team Clemson fell to. Notable wins this season came against sixth ranked Trinity, Big Ten Conference Champion Minnesota, Southwest Champion SMU, Miami of Florida, and rivals Georgia and Duke.

In regular season play, four of the five teams Clemson faced were ranked in the top 20. Clemson survived taking three of the five matches losing only to number two Stanford and number five Southern California. The Tigers went on to steamroll their next eight opponents. Involved in this streak were victories over nationally ranked Miami of Florida, UC-Irvine, Utah, and Texas. Clemson then lost two tough matches to Auburn and Trinity. But the Tigers went on to win another five straight games before dropping three in a row to top ten powers Arkansas, Pepperdine, and Southern California. Clemson eased through the rest of their schedule winning ten of their last eleven matches which included five wins over ACC teams. This allowed Clemson to clinch its second straight ACC title.

Clemson then proceeded to dominate the ACC Tournament held this year in College Park, Maryland. Clemson players took first place in four of six singles flights and all three doubles flights. Clemson's 138 points in the tournament was thirty points ahead of second-place Maryland and forty-two points ahead of third-place North Carolina. Outstanding Freshman Lawson

Duncan defeated the top seed Inaki Calvo of Maryland 6-3, 6-4 to capture the single title and boost his singles record to 63-13. Miguel Nido took the number three singles spot to give him a career total of 113 wins making him the fifth on Clemson's all-time winner list. By taking the number five singles flight, Sophomore Richard Matuszewski boosted his record to a perfect 10-0 in the ACC mark. Senior All-American Rick Rudeen and Andy Krantz both made it all the way to the finals before losing the number two and number four spots respectively. Senior Greg Cooper teamed with Andy Krantz to take the number one doubles flight titles with three different partners. The number two doubles team of Nido-Walters and the number three team of Rudeen-Frooman were also victorious in the finals. Every Clemson player that participated in the tournament took at least one first place title.

But Clemson wasn't as lucky at the NCAA Tournament in Athens, Georgia. The Tigers fell in the first round of the team competition to second-in-the-nation Stanford who made it all the way to the finals. Rudeen and Duncan participated in the individual singles tournament. Duncan had twenty-one wins over players ranked in the top forty in the nation. But Duncan fell one win short of capturing the NCAA singles crown when he was defeated by rival Michael Pernfors of Georgia 6-1, 6-4 in the finals.

With the loss of number one Freshman-turned pro Lawson Duncan, number two Senior Rick Rudeen, and the number one doubles team of Seniors Greg Cooper and Andy Krantz, Clemson had to turn incoming Freshman to fill empty spots. Two promising Freshmen were nationally ranked Junior player Jay Berger and Kent Kinard who would be fighting it out for starting spots on the varsity team. Returning Senior Miguel Nido should take the number one position, closely followed by Sophomores Richard Matuszewski and Matt Fooman, Freshman starter Brandon Walters and Juniors Andy Gondelman and David Huffman. The masterful coaching of Chuck Kriese and hard work of the players would hopefully produce another team ranked in the top Twenty.

Women's Tennis

Winning five of six singles titles and two of three doubles flights, Lady netters won their third consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference. Five Clemson players gave impressive performances in the three-day Tournament. Jane Forman, from Providence, RI was named the most valuable for the second time in her career. This made the seventh straight year that a Clemson individual achieved this honor. She also held the number one singles flight for the third straight year keeping the title for Clemson who has held it since the inaugural tournament in 1977. The two time All-American has won twenty-five of her last twenty-seven matches among the NCAA Top forty and posts a career record at Clemson of 33-4 of ACC matches.

Melissa Seigler won a third straight singles title and second consecutive doubles crown remaining undefeated in three seasons of conference play having won twenty-eight straight in ACC play.

Senior Jodi Trucks gained a career total of five ACC titles including the number four singles and number one doubles spots. Jane Neville captured for Clemson the number five singles and number three double spots and Lori Miller was the number six singles champion.

The Lady Netters also had a final overall record of 19-15 outscoring all opponents by a total of 184 to 115. They ended 7-2 in the ACC. Much of the team's success can be credited to Coach Andy Johnston. His two seasons at Clemson have ended in ACC Championships. A former tennis player, he has a good inside view of the program and a great outlook for the future of Tiger Women's Tennis.

Road 128 to L.A.

By Hans Koeleman

People always ask what the Olympic Games are like. The answer to that question will depend very much on the person who was there. Some people solely concentrate on their event and let everything else go by. There are others who try to join in all the excitement connected with something like the Games. In Los Angeles it was hard not to get involved in some of the outside-sport-activities but I tried hard to find a middle-way, concentrating to do the very best on the track but trying to leave California with at least a bit of the "Olympic Atmosphere" soaked into my mind.

Getting to the Olympic Games depends on several factors. A major one is the nationality that one is. If one is the nation's best breast stroker from Zaire or the national champion marathon-runner from Mangolia you might not end up in the luxurious Olympic Villages simply because every country has the right to send one athlete per event regardless of quality but these nations decided to do so. On the other hand, if one is the world's fourth-fastest 200 meter and an American, tough luck because the first three are from the U.S. as well as that's the maximum number of athletes per event allowed. Americans make the event by placing in the top three in their trials. Now, if you're from the Netherlands things get more complicated. Our Olympic Committee set standards, times they wanted their athletes to run or whatever else. If you make this mark no problem if you even miss it by one-hundredth of a second you're not going to the games.

Despite bad news, bad weather, and injuries both my roommate Stijn Jaspers and I made it. A pay off after all the miles, early nights and refused beers. Our initial and understandable fear was the idea of having ARA provide the meals. Clemson dining-halls could have learned a great deal as far as the quality-preparing, and variety are concerned. But at any rate, the whole set up in the village was arranged so we would feel at ease and we were treated like VIP's which led to no resistant on our part at all.

We were lucky, I guess to be stationed on the UCLA campus, "on the fancy part of town." Westwood was simply much more friendlier than downtown USC. Apart from that we were very close to the ocean which provided excellent training ground and a means of relaxation considering the many "sights" to see. What stuck both of us was the friendliness of the many people working for the L.A.O.O.C., the organizing committee. Most of these were volunteers working 8 hours a day trying to make the athletes feel comfortable. Even the black-clad Swat-teams of the L.A. Police Department who were stationed around the apartments loaded with the latest in terrorist-annihilating machinery, were very interested in what we did and were good for a few good jokes and discussions. All this led to the inevitable exchanging of all sorts of items, varying from t-shirts, police-pins, track shirts to Olympic stickers and addresses.

If there was one thing that really got on our nerves besides the everlasting noise of the helicopters and the eating habits of the Chinese contingent was the mobs of people standing outside the fenced-off village. Most wanted to exchange pins or buttons, which was nice at first but after a couple of days it was annoying on Westwood Boulevard and have crazed pin-covered maniac jump on your back yelling "Ya got any pins?"

The greatest thrill, other than advancing to the next round of competition with 90,000 looking upon us, were the Opening and Closing Ceremonies. But I should really say the whole Olympic Games were one big thrill. Everyone had their ups and downs, happy, and sad moments. Stijn fell on his face in the first round of the 5,000, I got hurt a week before the first round of the 5,000 steeple. Still all those people that were there and participated in the Closing Ceremonies left L.A. with a feeling of the Olympic Spirit. It is dead only for those who understand nothing of the Games, because everyone could get a touch of that special spirit . . .

Clemson soccer has been undergoing a change that many said would produce negative results. The change is to Americanization the program, and contrary to those forecasters beliefs, the results have been positive.

When the coach, Dr. I.M. Ibrahim, and his Tigers kicked off the 1984 soccer season, they knew it was the beginning of a challenging schedule. "This is my most difficult schedule in 18 years at Clemson. We are playing three of the four teams from last year's Final Four, seven teams that were ranked in the Top Twenty and two other teams that were in the Top Ten in Division II."

But the Tigers faced the challenge of each regular season game and as a team dominated their opponents in every statistic. They outshot their competitors 450-151. In assists the total was 62-18. Clemson won by a 72-20 margin in goals, with winning goals at 17-4. Finally, Ibrahim's bookers won in points standing 205-58.

In the opening game against seventh-ranked Connecticut, Eric Eichmann scored two goals to lead the Tigers offense and Chris Dudley, with the help of All-American, Adubarie Otonibo, registered a shut-out in his first varsity start in goal. The fifteen players who saw action in the opener defeated their opponent 5-0.

Next on the schedule was Mercer and the Tigers showed an outstanding performance in handling them, 6-1. Peter Stebbins gave tremendous effort during the game.

The Tigers traveled to the Indiana Classic where they lost their first round to UCLA, 2-1. The single goal was scored by Charlie Morgan, twenty-four seconds into the second half from thirty-five yards out, to tie the game 1-1. Stebbins attempted to put Clemson into the lead, but UCLA's David Vanole covered the shot.

The Tigers lost the second round in another close game against top-ranked Indiana. Chuck Nash took an Eichmann assist with a header that made the score 1-0. The Hossiers then pulled ahead as four different players brought the score up to 4-1. Eichmann scored two goals in the second half, ending the game against the defending national champs, 4-3.

The Tarheels challenged the Tigers to their first season opener which resulted in a close win for Clemson on Riggs Field. With 32:01 remaining on the clock, Maxwell Amateiro scored, shortly followed by a UNC score. Clemson's Gary Conner later scored on a pass from Murray. The Tiger defense turned on the steam to prevent the Tarheels from scoring again. With this victory, the number of wins on Riggs Field increased to forty-eight.

Appalachian State's Mountaineers stepped down from the hills into the valley only to find themselves chased by the Tigers. The September 19th game became the 3rd shutout of the season for Clemson. Conner and Murray both scored two goals while Morgan and Nash scored on each. The final goal of the game was headed in by Conner, ten feet away.

Clemson lost their second conference match to Duke. The Tigers missed some opportunities to take control of the Blue Devils. The 2-0 loss gave Clemson a record of 1-1 in the conference.

The rifles of USC-Spartanburg entered the "Valley" of Tiger soccer shooting strongly. They tested the defensive skills of the Tigers but goalie Tim Genovese was ready for their fire. He intercepted a Rifle throw-in with seconds left in the game. Eichmann booted in the winning score during the second half, giving the Tigers their ninth season victory.

The Tigers defeated the Gamecocks before a crowd of 2,000 on a hot afternoon in Columbia. Clemson took an early lead in the first half when Nash scored on a header. The game was sent into overtime by a score from USC's Doug Allison in the second half.

South Carolina gained control when they scored with 2:40 left in the first half of overtime to provide Clemson with a 3-2 win. The victory brought the total wins of Clemson over South Carolina to 8-0.

A leg injury received in the Winthrop game didn't stop Gary Conner from coming back to make outstanding contributions later in the season. He returned in the game against Davidson with one goal and one assist to help the Tigers shut-out the Wildcats. Maxwell Amatasiro took a pass from Murray and slammed it in from the right front of the goal to make the final 3-0.

Clemson then opened the Tournament against a tough Tampa team which threatened to break their regular season streak of fifty two wins at home. However, Murray, Dick Landgren, and Conner each scored a goal in less than eleven minutes, giving the Tiger booters the fifty-third game.

The fifty-fourth game was won against a Florida International team that had beaten by N.C.

The Tigers travelled to Greenville to pick up their nineteenth consecutive win against the Paladins. Murray and Conner both assisted each other on their respective goals and Nash added another to end the game 3-0.

Maryland bowed to Clemson on the 5-0 thrashing which brought the Tigers ACC record to 3-1. John Lee and Dick Landgren both scored two goals while Stebbins contributed the fifth.

The Cavaliers gave the Tigers their fourth loss and captured the ACC Championship. Although all statistics were in Clemson's favor, Virginia capitalized on their opportunities and consequently won 2-0. "The game was deceiving," Ibrahim said. "It was the most outstanding game we had played until that point in the season." The Tiger booters outshot Virginia in the game by 20-8 and the Virginia good-tender was forced to make eight saves.

Clemson was able to gain vengeance in an 8-0 victory over Vanderbilt. Eight different Tigers scored the goals in the biggest offensive output of the season. Danny Clavijo had two assists, Nash had a goal and an assist and Murray scored a goal and had two assists giving him a total of 13 assists for the season to lead the ACC. The two assists also allowed Murray to break Nnamdi Nwokocho's 1979 record.

A victory over N.C. State clinched an invitation for the Tigers to NCAA playoffs. Clemson scored first in the 3-2 win when Nash took a pass from Connor to make it 1-0. The Wolfpack tied the game before halftime, but Ibrahim's booters gained control in the second half when Connor scored on an Eichmann assist, putting them ahead for good.

The Tigers finished the regular challenging season, 17-4, and took second place in the ACC. Gary Conner finished as the team's leading scorer with thirty-eight points on eight assists and fifteen goals. He was also the leader in goals. Chuck Nash finished with twelve goals while Murray had ten. Murray also came out as the team's assist leader with fourteen assists, a new Clemson individual season record, and Eichmann had ten assists to his credit.

Booters Soar to New Heights

One of the few foreigners on the team Maxwell Amatasiro gives a powerful kick to Wolfpack defender.

Senior Maxwell Amatasiro continues moving the ball quickly with only seconds remaining in the game.

On December 16, at the Kingdome in Seattle the Tiger soccer team brought an end to a long era of struggle and became the dominate power in collegiate soccer by winning the National Championship. This season also marked the end of the predominant foreign influence in the program. With only four foreign players, all seniors, the team went further than any other Clemson soccer team.

The quest for this elusive title began with a 2-1 away victory against N.C. State, followed by a 3-1 home victory against undefeated Alabama A&M, the top ranked team in the nation. Alabama A&M crushed Clemson's hopes for the title last year by knocking them out of the first round of the tournament. Revenge was sweet.

Next, the Tiger booters went to Charlottesville to challenge the Cavaliers, the regular season ACC Champions. The Tigers refused to be intimidated. Playing with the same determination and desire that would later earn them the title of "the Giant Killers" in the NCAA tournament, the Tigers shut out Virginia 1-0. A major force in the victory was backup goalie Shawn Cartmill who was given his chance to play late in the Alabama A&M game when Tim Genovese, the regular goalie, separated his shoulder. Cartmill proved himself with the shut out and continued to allow only two goals in the remaining three games. Gary Connor scored the lone goal on the Virginia game off a rebounded attempt by Eric Eichmann with only 11:30 left in the game. With this victory the Tigers had officially reached the Final Four.

The next victims were the UCLA Bruins at Los Angeles. The Bruins had beaten Clemson earlier 2-1. This game was to be different though as the Tigers exploded, scoring three goals in ten minutes during the second half to beat their hosts 4-1. On the same afternoon, the Indiana Hoosiers, two time defending champions, beat a strong Hartwick team to get a shot for a record third-straight national title.

Indiana had beaten Clemson 4-3 earlier in a tournament which the Hoosiers had hosted. Indiana coach, Jerry Yeagley, said before the game that he would rather play a team he had not already played, and that the Tigers would be hard to handle due to their desire to win the title. The Tigers once again used the now veteran Cartmill as he started for the third time during the playoffs.

Cartmill and the rest of the defense had little opportunity to prove themselves in the beginning of the first half as Clemson totally dominated play. Clemson basically moved at will with excellent ball skills especially at midfield. The play of John Lee, Bruce Murray, Dick Landgren and Maxwell Amatasiro was outstanding. Lee was described later in the game to be all over the field snatching up loose balls and making repeated steals.

The first close Clemson opportunity came when Bill Fortner played a chip across the middle of the goal where freshman Murray jumped and headed the ball just outside the near spot. Indiana countered his attempt with six minutes left when Paul Dibernardo played a corner kick which rolled dangerously across the front of the net until it was cleared by star sweeper Adubarie Otorubio. Play for the half was marked by numerous fouls leading to the distinctions of a yellow card to Murray for a violent take down of an Indiana defender. The only indication of Clemson's domination in the half was the eight goal attempts versus Indiana's three.

The second half opened the same way the first half had ended. Clemson was pressuring but could not score. Midfielder Bernard Gray had a close attempt as he timed a ball thrown by Lee just wide of the Hoosier goal. The one Indiana bright spot was the containment of Eichmann by fullback Dave Bancek who effectively kept the dangerous striker out of play. The game remained scoreless well into the last half when the pace picked up noticeably. With twenty seven minutes remaining, Indiana's Rodrigo Castro fanned on a shot from eighteen yards away. Indiana kept the pressure up until Dibernardo booted a shot from twenty-two yards out, sending Cartmill sprawling down onto the Astro-turf for a great save. The rebound was cleared by Grey. Just minutes later Otorubio was called on to make a last minute slide tackle on Castro as he managed to break through to the eight yard line untouched.

With overtime becoming a serious possibility the scouring began. Lee picked up a loose ball and rushed downfield with it. After an Indiana defender had tipped the ball, Amatasiro recovered it and launched a bullet from thirty yards out. His shot hit the near post and bounced back into the field. With 11:14 left in the game Gary Connor beat everyone to the ball and wrapped an inswinger in on the short side. Clemson now had only to hold the Hoosiers for another eleven minutes and the title would be theirs.

But this was when Indiana showed the caliber of the team that they were. Using their experience, they refused to give up. The culmination of their efforts came when fullback Charlie Morgan was whistled for a foul twelve yards in front of his own net. The indirect kick was taken by John Stohlmeyer who tapped it to Dibernardo. Dibernardo rifled an instep drive that found the upper corner of the net. Cartmill could do nothing but watch the ball go into the net. Had Clemson blown its chances with only 6:49 left in the match?

The last six minutes of the game was plain, wide-open soccer. The Tigers again dominated keeping most of the play in the Hoosiers end resulting in a couple of corner kicks. Then the mighty blow came with only 1:42 left. Amatasiro lofted a corner kick towards the center where Landgren headed it in front of the goal. There it was headed into the net by Lee. The Tigers were finally national champs!

Despite the fact that the Tigers were only ninth in the polls going into the tournament, they proved that they were champions by beating the number one, two, three, four, and fifteen ranked team during the tournament. Hopefully this will mark the beginning of a dynasty for the team. Next year only four starters from the championship team will be gone and the future looks promising.

Always a Hurdle Ahead

By Darlene Smith

N.C. State's Men's team and Virginia's Women's team finished in the ACC Track and Field Championships, but Clemson's men and women tracksters were only a hurdle behind finishing third and fourth respectively.

The men's team held on to a strong third in the ACC Championships, held at Fetger Field in Chapel Hill, North Carolina. During the meet Stijn Jaspers set a new Fetger Field record in the 5000 meters with a time of 14:08.34. Jaspers was also clocked at 29:43.5 for an easy first in the 10,000 meter run.

Shot putter, Mike Spiritoso threw for a distance of 58-10 to capture the conference title in the event. Decathlete Eric Olson placed third with a total of 6,792 points in the grueling ten events. The tracksters are hoping to continue their success in the future.

The Lady tracksters finished fourth in the ACC Championships behind Virginia, North Carolina, and Maryland. The women's track though only comprised of distance runners, still managed to obtain a national ranking.

Leading the way was Tina Krebs, who set a new ACC meet record at Fetger Field; she later qualified for the Olympic Trials and the NCAA Championships with a personal best time of 2:02.81 in the women's half time.

Judith Shepard claimed second in the 3,000 meters behind Joan Nesbitt of U.N.C. Trackster Stephanie Weikert placed a third in the 5000 meter run. With continuing hard work the lady tigers look even stronger next year.

Coach Coalson has laid a fine foundation for the men's Cross Country team program which has become a national powerhouse. The very first meet of the season the Tiger men ran away with the Georgia State Invitational title. Stand-out, Rob de Brouwer won the meet with a time of 25:15. He would later taste victory again at the ACC Championships. Stijn Jaspers posted a second with a 25:16, and Chris Schoen pulled in a third with a 25:15. The next week they traveled on to the University of North Carolina where Rob de Brouwer took second and managed to better his time by over a minute, being clocked at 23:50. Martin Flynn opened up his season by placing sixth with a 23:55. Jeff Scuffins crossed the line in fifteenth with a 24:14.

Cross Country's next trip was to Wisconsin where they placed second overall. Stijn Jaspers was the Harriers top runner placing seventh at 23:59 outleading teammate Rob de Brouwer 24:08. Martin Flynn placed fifteenth in 24:24; behind him was teammate Jeff Scuffins in sixteenth.

In the ACC Championships the men finished second for the overall title. Outstanding performances were made by Rob de Brouwer first with 24:10, and Jeff Scuffins in third with 24:18. Eighth position was held by Rob Wotring with 24:40.

The Lady Tigers put together another outstanding season. Their "Commitment to Excellence" has enabled them to take pressure of their top runners and develop more depth in others. The team opened their season with an overall victory at the Georgia State Invitational. Tere Stouffer finished first with a time of 18:18 while Desiree Heijnen was second in 18:30 and the third spot went to Laura Montgomery at 18:40.

The following week they moved on to the University of North Carolina Invitational where the team placed second overall. In tenth place was Judith Shepherd timed at 17:15 and the eleventh position went to Kirsti Voldness at 17:10. The Tigers then moved to Furman where they added yet another victory with a total of 36 points, followed by the University of North Carolina with 57 points and Florida State brought in 59. Leading the team to victory was the individual winner Tina Krebs being clocked at 17:20. Other finishers in the meet were Kirsti Voldnes, fourth, with a time of 17:32 and Judith Shepherd, eighth, with a time of 18:07.

Next came the ACC Championships where the Tigers came from behind to finish an impressive second place overall finish. Tina Krebs once again led the team to a second place individual finish timed at 16:40. Judith Shepherd brought home fourth at 17:24, and a strong tenth place finish went to Kirsti Voldness.

"The Year it Wasn't Meant to be"

By Foster Senn

"Worried about Clemson." That was Head Coach Danny Ford's theme throughout the 1984 season as the Tiger football team struggled to a somewhat disappointing 7-4 record. The Tigers never really seemed to play up to their full potential in a year that they were the preseason consensus pick to win the National Championship.

Clemson opened the season strong with wins over Appalachian State and Virginia. Consecutive Saturday trips to the state of Georgia, however, put two notches in the loss column and ended any hopes for the national crown. The Tigers battled back with five wins, assuring them of a winning season for the eighth straight year. Losses to Maryland and South Carolina, however, ended the season on a sour note.

The 1984 season was Clemson's last year on probation. The NCAA's sanctions were lifted on November 24, but the Atlantic Coast Conference penalties extended through January 2, thus denying a possible bowl trip. Clemson appealed the conference penalties in June but was unsuccessful.

With no chance of a bowl, the Tigers approached the season talking of 11 wins and the Number One spot in the nation. Clemson was ranked as high as second in the nation before the downfalls in the Peach State.

Several Tigers received individual honors at the close of the season. William Perry, Dale Hatcher, Donald Igwebuike, Ronald Watson, Steve Reese, and Terrance Routhac were named to the All-ACC team. Perry was also named the conference player-of-the-year and an All-American.

Eppley threw an 11-yard scoring strike to Terrance Roulhac as the Tigers raced to a 19-0 halftime lead. Terrence Mack's two second half interceptions set up two more touchdowns and a 33-0 lead. The Virginia Cavaliers seemed ready for an upset as they prepared to meet the third ranked Tigers. The Cavaliers' hopes were dashed, however, as the Tiger juggernaut crushed Virginia early, late, and in the middle of the game too. The Tigers looked like a team that could go all the way after that contest. Igwebuike kicked a field goal, and Terrence Flagler went over from the one for a 10-0 first quarter lead. Eppley lit the scoreboard with two scoring tosses of his own—the first a 46-yard pass to Ray Williams and the second a 34-yard strike to Roulhac. Meanwhile, the defense was keeping bottled up, and William Perry was having one of his better days with nine tackles including three sacks. Flagler, Driver, Kenny Danforth, and Williams each added another touchdown as the Tigers moved on to a 2-0 record.

"The Year it Wasn't Meant to Be"

Clemson 23 Georgia 26

It was a game that lasted the full 60 minutes but will be remembered for only its last 20 seconds. After almost four quarters of intense football action, Georgia placekicker Kevin Butler booted a tremendous 60-yard field goal through the uprights to give the Bulldogs a three point lead over the Tigers. Only 14 ticks remained on the clock, but the Tigers made one last effort. Ray Williams received the kickoff and later railed the ball across the field to Roulhac who raced upfield with the ball. Seeing that he would be unable to score, Roulhac stepped out of bounds at approximately the Georgia 40-yard line. As he stepped out, Roulhac was hit and a flag was thrown for a late hit on Georgia. However, the officials met and ruled that time had expired before Roulhac had stepped out and thus the game was over. Clemson had taken an early lead in the contest when Eppley threw to K.D. Dunn for a 16-yard touchdown. Igwebuike added a field goal and Butler kicked two others before Eppley lofted a 27-yard touchdown pass to Flagler to give the Tigers a 20-6 halftime lead. Georgia took advantage of several second half turnovers by the Tigers to knot the score at 20, however. The teams traded field goals to set up the dramatic conclusion.

Clemson 21 Georgia Tech 28

After one of Clemson's better comebacks in recent memory, Georgia Tech calmly marched 54 yards down the field for a touchdown with 33 seconds remaining to top the Tigers on a chilly day in Atlanta. Tech blew Clemson off the field in the first half as they flew to a 21-0 halftime advantage. The Tigers countered with three lightning quick touch-downs. Eppley hit Richard Butler for 25-yard scoring pass, and then Steve Griffin barreled in from 20 yards out to cut the Jacket lead to seven. Clemson drove straight down the field again with Eppley hitting Roulhac over the middle for a touchdown and a tie game at 21. After a punt exchange the Jackets went on their winning march to hand the Tigers their second defeat.

Clemson 20 North Carolina 12

Third and long—Clemson had the ball on their own 24 with under 11 minutes to go. Eppley took out: He looked deep for Roulhac; he got it! Touchdown! That was the big play as the Tigers rallied by the Tar Heels. UNC

Duke had a difficult time getting to Parete because of the great defensive play by Joe Ellis (64), Steve Griffin (44), and Andy Cheatham (61).

Flowers was the leading rusher of the day with 119 yards in 11 attempts. Roulhac topped his season touchdown total to six with two TD receptions, and he gained 129 yards on five receptions. Perry also got into the act as he became Clemson's all-time leader in career quarterback sacks.

save the game. With the Tigers holding on to a precarious one-point lead, the Wolfpack drove all the way to the Tiger 10-yard line. Reggie Pleasant turned the tide, however, with an interception in the end zone to send the Tigers to victory. Both teams began the game in a hurry. Driver and Griffin scored for Clemson early but an interception return for a touchdown by Matt Franklin gave State a 24-21 lead at the half. Driver, who finished with 72 yards, made his way into the end zone twice more to give Clemson all the points they needed. The Tiger defense had problems tackling State ball carriers all day, but when the game was on the line, the defense did its job.

Clemson 37 Wake Forest 14

Four Tigers scored touchdowns and Igwebuike added three field goals as the Tigers dropped Wake Forest on a chilly, overcast day at Memorial Stadium. Roulhac, Flagler, Driver, and Williams each put six points on the board. Griffin was Clemson's leading ground gainer with 54 yards, and Eppley was 11 of 17 in the passing department. One of the more interesting plays of the season occurred when Perry blocked a Deacon lineman into the ball on a punt. The ball went backwards 36 yards where Clemson recov-

Painted faces, balloons, flashcards, and touchdowns all combined to give Clemson a seven point win during Spirit Blitz weekend. Clemson came out throwing, and the third play of the game was a 66-yard TD pass from Eppley to Roulhac. The Hokies, however, weren't going to roll over yet. A one-yard touchdown run by Maurice Williams and a 26 yard field goal gave Tech the upper hand. Ray Williams's 17-yard stroll on a flanker reverse put the Tigers back on top to stay.

Despite the final outcome, the Tigers were overwhelmed in the statistics. Tech got 20 first downs while the Tigers made only eight first downs and 97 yards rushing. Tech's defense came to Clemson highly touted and certainly lived up to the advance billing behind the play of All-American Bruce Smith. A win is a win, though, and this one ran the Tigers record to 7-2.

Clemson 23 Maryland 41

USC's Scott Hagler missed the extra point but Clemson was penalized for too many men on the field. Given a reprieve, Hagler booted in second attempt through the uprights to give Carolina the victory. The orange magic seemed to be working in the first half as Clemson took a 21-3 lead in the second quarter. After that the Tigers were unable to score again and in fact, never moved past the Gamecock 39 again. Meanwhile, Hold was scrambling Carolina down the field and back into the game. Hagler's 41-yard field goal with 7:19 remaining cut the margin to six points. The Tigers were unable to run out the clock or score so the Gamecocks took over and marched to victory. The loss ended Clemson's season at 7-4—not the original goal but still not bad at all.

Rebuilding begins under Coach Norris

By Richard M. Baldwin II

The volleyball team started under a new helm for the 1984 season. Coach Wayne Norris replaced Margie Wessel who left to coach in Florida. Coach Norris had double responsibility as he was also the assistant swimming coach for the fourth year. Coach Norris was assisted by Clemson's most decorated volleyball player, Judy Sackfield. This was the sixth year that Judy was associated with the volleyball program. Judy's playing experience and enthusiasm was a strong factor in the success of the volleyball squad.

The Lady Tigers began the season on the road as they lost their first three matches to the College of Charleston and Western Carolina. The Ladies traveled to Birmingham, Alabama to play the University of Alabama—Birmingham tournament. That did not help the Tigers record as they lost all four matches to Mississippi, Central Florida, Alabama—Birmingham, and Tennessee Tech.

The Lady Tigers played their first home game at the end of September and beat instate-rival Francis Marion. The Spikers then traveled to Rock Hill to play Winthrop and High Point in a trimatch, but lost to both teams.

For the next three weeks the Lady Tigers played both home and away games. The Tigers only won three matches against ACC teams, beating Wake Forest, and Georgia Tech. Then the Tigers lost a second game to the University of South Carolina. The midseason injuries began to plague the Tigers as they lost to Virginia, North Carolina, and N.C. State.

The Ladies traveled up to Hempsted, New York to play in the Hofstra Tournament. The Tigers won only one match of the five they played in the tournament; this was against Farleigh Dickinson.

The Spikers could win only one of their final two home games. They beat Western Carolina three games to two, and venged their early season loss, but then lost to Maryland in three straight games.

Commenting on the team's play, Coach Norris said, "We had a very young team and they were inexperienced. We lost all our starters from last year. Though we were getting better by midseason, we started having problems with injuries."

Assistant Coach Judy Sackfield said, "We are not tall; Wake Forest and Georgia Tech have a lot of tall girls on their teams. The lack of height is a definite disadvantage."

Both coaches felt that middle blocker Deanne Browning was an outstanding player his year. Deanne, a senior, made the All-Atlantic Coast Conference team, thereby ending the season on a good note.

Grapplers are Better than Ever

By Karen Woodson

Two wrestlers maneuver for the right moment to go for a take down.

Wrestler Gary Nivens seems to have things all wrapped up.

With having experienced the success in the last year that they had never seen before, head wrestling coach, Eddie Griffin, was excited about his second season here at Clemson. With each match the team broke old records and continued setting new goals for themselves. The team obtained the highest national ranking it ever had. A key reason for this success was the return of seven lettermen and a strongly recruited freshmen team.

The season began in November with an opener against Carson-Newman College in which the grapplers won with a score of 37-6. They next moved on to the Ohio Open and the Southern Open in which the team placed sixth and fifth respectively. On November 27th they fell victim to Oregon with a score of 21-27.

December continued to be promising for the Tigers when they faced meets against Tennessee-Chattanooga, Indiana State, and Oklahoma State with victories over Tennessee-Chattanooga, and Indiana State. The Tigers placed third overall in the Sunshine Open in Deland, Florida.

After they returned home during the Christmas break road trip, they continued to have meets against Indiana State and ended with two losses against California State-Bakersfield and Iowa State. December left the Grapplers with a record of five wins and four losses.

The tri-meet on January 11th against Notre Dame and Maryland continued to be a success as they defeated both teams at Clemson. The quad-meet with South Carolina State, Winston-Salem State, and The Citadel also ended victorious for the Tigers. These games gave them an overall record of 10-4.

February started off with a loss against North Carolina but the Tigers did not quit. Georgia Tech forfeited the next match to the Tigers. This led to a third place standing in the Southeastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association Tournament against teams as LSU, Georgia Tech, UT-Chattanooga, Tennessee, Carson-Newman, and Central Florida. defeated North Carolina State followed by meets with Virginia and Duke. Ending with a record of thirteen wins and five losses, the ACC record was three wins and only one loss. The ACC tournament was held on March 1st and 2nd and the NCAA's on March 14th to 16th. Together the team continued their progress, making the National Championships their goal.

The Lady Tigers closed their season with a 19-8 overall record and an 8-6 ACC conference mark. The hoopsters survived a sluggish ACC start losing their first three conference games before capturing eight of their next eleven. Included were sweeps over Wake Forest, Georgia Tech, Maryland, and nationally-ranked Virginia.

The Tigers opened conference play New Year's Day with a loss to Duke at Durham. During that game the Lady Tigers enjoyed a commanding 22-8 lead but a series of turnovers enabled the Blue Devils to pull even at 24 and eventually take a 42-38 halftime lead. The second half was tight with both teams taking the lead several times, but Duke's outstanding foul shooting clinched it at the end of the game.

Next was North Carolina at Littlejohn Coliseum. The Tar Heels defeated the Lady Tigers 75-70 in part due to a .333 percent field goal average for the Tigers.

The Tigers next game was a five-point defeat at the hands of N.C. State, 74-70. The Tigers defeated the Yellow Jackets in overtime 84-81 in their first ACC victory of the season.

The victory maintained the Tiger's perfect series mark against Tech which now stands at 9-0. The same enthusiasm that propelled the Tigers past Georgia Tech helped to defeat the Maryland Terrapins 66-61 for only the third time in thirteen meetings.

The Tiger women failed to score in the final 4:17, enabling the Duke Blue Devils to take the 76-70 victory over Clemson. The Tigers were lead by the strong inside shooters of seniors, Sandy Bishop and Peggy Caple to down the Virginia Cavaliers, 75-67 in Littlejohn.

The hoopsters, who once owned a 14-point lead in the game, saw a Sandy Bishop jumper fall short and North Carolina convert the rebound into a basket to capture a 76-71 win in Chapel Hill.

The Tigers relied heavily on Janet Knight's 29 points to capture a 76-68 victory over the Demon Deacons.

Georgia State could not overcome miserable field goal shooting nor the strong inside game of the Tigers, as they fell 84-73 in Littlejohn. State shot a poor 22 percent in the first half and ended the game with a 28.7 percent, giving the Tigers the victory.

NC State's Linda Page scored 25 of their 38 points on the second half to send the Lady Tigers to their sixth ACC defeat.

The Tigers opened the contest against Mars Hill with a 17-2 spurt that virtually decided the game in the first seven minutes, leaving nothing but the final score to be determined, 100-63. Mars Hill was held to 23 points in the first half while only being allowed a 34.1 percent field goal shooting.

BASKETBALL '85

The Tigers entered the contest weary of the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets. Earlier in the year the Tigers narrowly escaped from Atlanta with a hard-fought overtime victory that left the Tigers cautious in their next meeting.

The caution was unnecessary, however, as the Tiger hoopsters opened a 19-9 lead and slowly pulled away to capture a 95-75 point win.

Against Western Carolina the Tigers never trailed against the Catamounts, as they used strong defense and height under the boards to capture a 91-62 nonconference victory.

The Lady Tigers used the strong inside play of Sandy Bishop and the accurate perimeter game of Melinda Ashworth and Renee Williams to down the Virginia Cavaliers 66-63 in an important ACC victory.

The Tigers entered College Park to face the Maryland Terrapins in a building in which they had never won. In their seven previous tries at Cole Field House, the Tigers had never left with a victory.

The Lady Tigers, ignoring the past, posted an 87-83 victory to give them their eighth ACC win and their first victory ever in College Park.

In their final game of the season, the Tigers played one of their finest games of the year as they cruised to an 83-61 victory over USC.

The Lady Tigers had an unusual season with impressive wins, often contrasted by frustrating performances. That middle-season inconsistency was overcome as the Tigers garnered one of their best years.

Making his Debut

by Evelyn J. Gora

As another basketball season began, there appeared a new face on the court. This new man was Head Coach Cliff Ellis who took over after Bill Foster's resignation last March. Taking a look at his record, it is easy to see why he got the job, and why he will not have any problems handling it.

After bringing Southern Alabama out of their slump in 1975 in just four seasons, they became ranked in the top ten in the nation. And now he is bringing this fast-tempo style of play to Tigertown. Coach Ellis realizes that a tough fourteen game schedule faces Clemson with North Carolina State or Duke being the top contenders for the ACC championships. But he plans on doing his best to shape up the team with long, hard practices, no free evenings, and rigorous weight programs, leaving the players little room for extracurricular activities.

Ellis feels that it will take two years of good recruiting to put the team in a position where he can make an honest evaluation of their hopes for the future. In recruiting, Ellis looks for players with skill, quickness, jumping ability, and size. But even these qualities do not guarantee performance because a player's worth is only proved once he is on the team.

When Coach Ellis does leave the sweaty gym and stroll around the campus, he finds students with a strong devotion and love for the school. He believes that students and their spirit are an important part of any good athletic program.

When not coaching, Ellis can be found on the golf course, fishing, or cruising in his car to Sixties' beach music. Ellis even cut his own top ten rock 'n' roll single in the Sixties. Other high-points in his life include the birth of his first child and accepting Christianity in the Seventies. His next goal is to remain in Clemson and make his dream of winning the NCAA Basketball Championships come true.

"Coming Alive in '85" was the new theme for the basketball team. Last year the team jumped to a 7-0 start, but that was only the start, unfortunately. Ill-health and injuries depleted the team and caused them to end the season with a record of 14-14. The team did bounce back for the 1985 season, and ended with a 15-11 overall and a 5-9 ACC record.

The returning team consisted of four starters and seven lettermen, giving new Head Coach Cliff Ellis a solid core of talent to work with. This former Southern Alabama head coach brought enthusiasm and an up-tempo playing style that kept many fans on the edge of their seats.

The debut of Ellis and the revamped Tigers was both exciting and disappointing as the visiting Tennessee Tech Golden Eagles finally defeated them 68-67 in overtime. The Tigers continued giving their all up to the last minute of the game. After the game Coach Ellis commented, "We played a very experienced team that won 19 games last season and returned everyone from the squad. But we also made a few big mistakes that cost us the game."

As the season continued the core of 13 dropped to nine as Anthony Jenkins and Anthony Blackman were injured and point guards David Shaffer and Warren Wallace transferred to other colleges.

The opener ACC game vs. ninth ranked Georgia Tech was to be played in Atlanta. Tech was favored to defeat Clemson, but the Tigers remained composed as they held on to a lead for most of the game. Even in the Georgia Tech comeback the Tigers remained undaunted and held on to win 90-81.

In the next three ACC games the Tigers dropped a heartbreaker to N.C. State and came up just short of defeating Wake Forest and Maryland.

The Wolfpack held on to a slim lead in the second half to defeat the Tigers. State opened by taking a quick 17-4 lead before the Tigers scored 12 points to pull within one at 10:12.

The lead went back and forth throughout the first half with State gaining a 36-35 point lead into the half.

The Wolfpack started the second half with a 10-4 spurt with most of the scoring coming from Lorenzo Charles and Russell Pierre from the low post. The Pack, however, held on to the lead for the remainder of the game to take a 71-68 victory. "We played well the whole game, but we just couldn't control Charles when it counted," said Coach Ellis. Charles ended the game as the high scorer with 29 points.

The Demon Deacons of Wake Forest ran to a big first-half lead which gave them an 83-61 victory in Winston-Salem. An upbeat note for the Tigers was the tenacious second-half play of reserves Harlem Graham and Harvey Grant who lent a helping hand to the harrier starters.

In the first half play against Maryland the hoopsters lost 94-84 in College Park to a hot-shooting Terrapin team. The Tigers played a lackluster first half but battled back in the second-half to cut the Terp lead to four before committing three turnovers that spurred Maryland on to regain control of the game.

After nine consecutive defeats by Virginia the Tigers came out roaring in an 82-62 victory over the Cavaliers. The Tigers took off to an imposing 20-6 lead early in the first half and never let up as they went into the halftime with a 37-18 lead. In the second half the Cavaliers managed to stage a small comeback, but the Tigers took it in stride and held the Cavaliers at arms length to capture the win.

Against the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets got a second wind midway through a tight game. A 15-5 spread in the second half lead to a 64-59 victory.

"A pretty good shot," was Chris Michael's comment. To 11,000 fans that shot won the game for Clemson. And that basket was nothing but awesome, to those sitting in Littlejohn.

Michael's 20-foot jumper with two seconds remaining in the game ended the score at 52-50. This also ended Clemson's 12 game losing streak against North Carolina since 1980.

Delaware State scored first in the opening 12 seconds, but the Tiger hoopsters gained 11 points and cruised to a 96-65 non-conference victory.

The Tigers took a step back as they lost to N.C. State Wolfpack 69-57. Strong play from Glen Corbit, Vincent Hamilton, and Grayson Marshall kept the Tigers in the game, but were still unable to pull out the victory.

USC had not defeated the Tigers in Littlejohn since the 1971-72 season. The record stood. The game was tight in the first half as both USC and the Tigers couldn't gain a lead of more than two points. At the 12 minute mark, Clemson broke away with a 6-0 run highlighted by Raymond Jones' three point play. This run gave a 34-21 point lead that was never relinquished by the Tigers.

The 83-61 defeat of the Tigers first meeting with the Demon Deacons seemed to fuel the hoopsters to an impressive 80-65 victory over Wake Forest in their second meeting.

Coach Lefty Driesell of the Maryland Terrapins came looking for his 500th win in Littlejohn. He went away still searching for that elusive 500th. The Terrapins went down 94-84.

The Tigers placed four people in double figures and were lead by Vincent Hamilton 20 points and 10 rebounds. Others reaching double digits were Horace Grant with 16, Chris Michael with 10, and Raymond Jones with 10.

On the road at Charlottesville, Virginia, the Tiger hoopsters fell 69-66 in the wake of the blistering 71.4 percent Cavalier performance during the second half. Carmichael Auditorium proved to be a calgary for the Tigers. The hoopsters went down 84-50 to the North Carolina Tar Heels, while the Duke Blue Devils stepped on the Tigers, 90-73.

Ending on a high note, the Tigers defeated Winthrop College, 100-55. The Tigers ended this tough season, under a new coach, and came out of the 1984-85 season proving that they could play with the best.

Two of the most underrated teams on campus were the men's and women's swim teams. But they made up for this by their show of spirit, making them one of the rowdiest teams. They were a dedicated group that did not have thousands of fans at their home meets, but for those who had never experienced a swim meet, it was an event to be remembered.

The biggest turn around came for the women. Going into the ACC Championships the women had compiled a record of 8-2 and were ranked eleventh in the nation — the highest ranking the women have achieved under coach Boettner in his nine year career at Clemson.

The year began with four blowouts, all on the road. Duke, South Florida, Purdue, and Indiana all became victims of the Tigers, each defeated by at least 25 points. Paced by both veterans and rookies, the Tigers had created a machine that appeared unstoppable.

Junior Linda Rutter and Senior Callie Emery were both double winners in the Duke meet. Rutter won the 200 IM and 500 free. Emery, a sprinter, won the 50 and 100 free events. The meet was also the debut for several highly regarded freshmen; Pam Hayden, Jan Kemmerling and Nadra Simmons were high school All-Americans. Kemmerling attended the Olympic training camp while Hayden and Simmons qualified for the Olympic time trials. In her first meet Hayden, a butterfly and freestyle specialist, won what could be called her best event — the 200 fly. She also helped in the 400 medley relay.

Simmons, a backstroker and freestylist, won the 200 back.

At Purdue, Simmons came to the forefront by winning the 100 back with an NCAA qualifying time and setting a pool record in the 100 free. Rutter also took the 50 and 1000 free. Hayden shined at the following meet at Indiana University, setting a pool record in the 200 free and a Clemson record in the 200 fly. The 400 medley relay team of Junior Judy Vanderhorst, Simmons, Hayden, and Emery set another school record. Sophomore Kitty Christian turned in her personal best to win the 200 breaststroke.

After an easy victory over Furman the Lady Tigers suffered their first defeat at the hands of conference foe Virginia. The women then returned for the final three meets of the season, accomplishing a first by beating North Carolina for the first time in the history of the team. They also beat N.C. State before falling to South Carolina.

The one meet for which the women and men combined forces was the Alabama Invitational. The team effort produced a total of 18 new Clemson University records, 13 NCAA time qualifications and 30 Senior National time cuts. All of this led to a 200 point victory over second place Kansas.

The three freshmen set the pace for the women. Hayden made NCAA qualifying times in the 200 free, the 500 free, and the 200 fly; Simmons qualified in the 100 and 200 backstroke events; Kemmerling set a school record in the 200 IM and also qualified for the NCAA meet in both the 400 IM and 500 free.

The men dominated in Alabama. Coy Cobb set an NCAA time cut in the 100 back. Jay Herbert, a Junior, set two new Clemson records in the 100 and 200 breaststroke races. Junior Jeff Stachelek swept the freestyle sprint events winning the 50, 100, and 200.

Freshman Bill Hyman and juniors Jeff Poland and Tim Welting were all victorious, helping the team finish the season at 8-3 with a ranking of fifteenth in the nation. Their losses came to Indiana, N.C. State, and South Carolina.

Another standout who led the team was freshman diver Chuck Wade. Wade swept both the one meter and three meter competitions on several occasions. Cobb, a returning three time All-American, won many firsts in a wide spread of events.

The season opener at Duke provided the team's first win, paced by Welting, who won the 200 free and the 200 fly. Against Purdue, Cobb and senior teammate Dick Mercer took the spotlight. Cobb won both the 100 free and 200 IM, while Mercer took the 200 free and 200 breast.

Indiana was next and the Hoosiers gave the Tigers a severe beating. The national powerhouse Hoosiers won all but two events. Cobb managed a win in the 50 free and Welting copped a first in the 200 fly.

The regular season ended for the Tigers with two straight losses. N.C. State and South Carolina won back to back at Clemson. During this time Cobb saw limited action due to tendonitis in his right shoulder.

Tigertown now looked forward to hosting the ACC's. The women went in with a shot to win it as the Lady Tigers held seven ACC best times. Both Hayden and Kemmerling had two each.

When the first weekend of the competition was over the women had placed third. UNC won it with Virginia being a very close second place. The Tigers finished third — 46 points behind first place, and several hundred ahead of fourth place.

Diver Carolyn Hodge continued her dominance on the board as she won both the one and three meter events. Rutter made the NCAA cuts in three events while sophomore Molly Kueny qualified with a school record in the 50 and 100 frees and a lifetime best in the 200 free. The women's team took eight members to the Nationals in March. Included were the freshmen trio of Hayden, Kemmerling, and Simmons who qualified for eight events.

The Men's ACC Championships provided for suspense as defending champion N.C. State trailed Clemson by one point going into the final event of the 800 freestyle relay. N.C. State responded with a pool record and a NCAA qualifying to win the event and the meet also. The final score was 693-688.

Despite losing by five points the Tigers managed to win 11 of the 18 events. Clemson also swept the ACC year awards. Coy Cobb was named swimmer of the year, Chuck Wade, diver of the year. Coach Boettner was selected ACC Coach of the Year, having led the team to a very exciting and productive year.

BEHIND THE LINES

Where do they fit in?

by Evelyn Gora

Waiting on the sidelines, as Phillip Jhant does here, is a very small part of the trainers' job.

Trainer David Curry helps the team get ready for the next series.

Many fans think the only jobs that the trainers and managers do is cart juices to the players during timeouts and throw balls with them during warmups. Actually all their work is done in preparation before and after the game. The game is one of the easier tasks — making sure everything runs in order. This outstanding group of twenty-five student trainers and managers gains its self-gratification on how well the team looks on Saturdays. Each student must put in a whopping 40 to 50 hours a week and are still required to keep up with schoolwork. Being the first to get in and last to leave leaves little time for free evenings and weekends.

The trainers main job deals with preventing and caring for injuries. With well over 100 football players to tape, the training room goes through numerous roles each day taping everything from fingers to feet. They must constantly replace the fluids for the football players, making sure there is always enough to drink. One unusual job many may not know about is that there is a special case where mouthpieces are kept and are made for the athletes with dental problems. Another job that trainers must do is drive the shuttle bus at 6:30 A.M. to Jervey everyday so injured players can have their major injuries treated.

The managers responsibility is equipment — making sure it is set out before practice and taken in after. They must also watch for equipment failures such as straps breaking. Many of the managers jobs are broken down, one even having to do up to 1,000 pounds of laundry a day. Another duty is making sure practice sticks to schedule by blowing an airhorn at the end of every five minute intervals. One other person must keep people off the practice field so that the coaches won't be disturbed. Other jobs include: running drills with the players, setting up the dummies, spotting drills for the players, and getting balls for the receivers.

A job many may not know about is the way the managers set up the locker room for the players on football Saturdays. All of the shoes are polished, helmets waxed, and jerseys hung neatly. "We take great pride in the way the locker room looks for the players," said Bobby Douglas head manager.

The trainers and managers may still not get all the respect they deserve. One thing that is certain is that Clemson football would not exist today if it weren't for this dedicated group of individuals.

Clemson's team depends on the trainers and managers for the important details, like taping and equipment.

Though they can't control what goes on on the field, the managers and trainers keep things running smoothly on the sidelines.

Track, Cross Country

The talented Danish track and cross country standout, Tina Krebs, has already made a national reputation for herself. Nothing seems to get Tina down with her endless bursts of energy. After an injury kept her from competing in the Olympics, Tina is back on the track winning again.

A favorite memory for Tina was an unexpected win at age fifteen in the Nationals (she went on to win it six more times). When asked what books she enjoys reading she replied, "no cheap novels." Tina believes, "Track should only be a part of a persons life because there's so much more." Tina is grateful to God for her talent and is determined to put it to good use.

The part Tina dislikes about Clemson is being so far from home and her family. Her future plans are to get a job in Denmark and to "help others pursue their interests." As long as Tina Krebs continues holding her head up, things will continue looking her way.

Miguel Nido

From the island of Puerto Rico hails the sensation of first singles, Miguel Nido. Miguel says he admires the playing style of "Illie Nastase". What he enjoys most about the environment at Clemson is its "college town atmosphere combined with its strong athletic program."

Looking back at a favorite memory was the NCAA game where they came back to defeat Arkansas from a 4-2, to a 5-4 victory. Miquel enjoys sitting in his favorite class of Psychology Adjustment and learning about dealing with people.

His future plans are to travel, make a career out of tennis, maybe get a "real job," and get married. The image Nido wants to project is hopefully of a "good guy." Miguel Nido appears as successful in this endeavor as he has been in his past endeavors.

Coy Cobb
Swimming

One of the high points of Coy Cobb's swimming career was competing in the Olympic trials in Indianapolis. Though the competition was stiff, Coy managed to make it to the night time meets in the 100-butterfly. He did not make it to Los Angeles, but he did make a name for himself among World-Class swimmers. He recalls a bad moment in Rio when the call-to-your-mark was said in Spanish, and he and two other Americans were left on the blocks at the start of the race.

Coy began his swimming career in Florida where his family had a strong influence on him. He enjoys Clemson and meeting new people. But when he likes to be alone he goes behind Jervey at the practice fields. He feels his most vivid memory of Clemson will be the tiger paws.

After graduation he hopes to attend graduate school and use his major of Administrative Management, in business. His three wishes for the future are, "health, happiness, and income."

With his friendly Long Island accent, Jim McCollom jokingly reveals his secret desire to be Chef-Boy-ar-dee. All kidding aside, the All-ACC baseball star admires John Wayne and his father, and if he were to be anyone other than himself, he would choose either of them. On the field Jim wears the number 15 — the number of his baseball hero, Thurmond Munson. However, Jim would rather be a New York Met than Yankee. The way Jim has been playing, his wish may come true even if a Genie does not come down and grant him three wishes (but you may have to call on her for the Rolls Royce and National Championship, Jim!)

Just one example of Jim's extraordinary baseball talent is the time that stands out as his biggest thrill in baseball. It was a summer college league in Virginia. Jim's team had fallen behind 10-0 in the first inning, causing the crowd of 10,000 to diminish to 1,000. Although the crowd gave up, Jim and his team did not. His team won 20-18, and Jim was the hero. He hit three home runs and accounted for 10 runs batted in.

Jim enjoyed the friendly people and relaxed atmosphere most at Clemson. He regularly attended St. Andrew's Catholic church and would someday like to get married and raise a family.

Mere enjoyment of the sport motivates Jim to keep playing baseball. A shot at a future in the major leagues doesn't hurt either. The many students who never attended home baseball games missed the opportunity of seeing a future big league all-star perform, not to mention a whole team of excellent players.

A diver out of New Jersey, Nancy Wellish said she had never heard of Clemson when she met the coach. But a visit here convinced her that she belonged at this University. The facilities, she felt, were among the best in this part of the country, and the closeness of Lake Hartwell impressed her. She also enjoyed running by the horticultural gardens, where she goes to be alone.

The landscape is not the only part of Clemson Nancy enjoyed. Her major, Parks, Recreation, and Tourism Management, had also made a big impression on her. The professors in her department are probably what Nancy will remember most about Clemson in later years. She would like to go into tourism work or sales after graduation and possibly do some coaching as a hobby.

Nancy said that she would like to be taken seriously as a sincere person and a hard worker. She wished that people had more tolerance for people who are different from themselves. She enjoyed reading classical novels and newspapers, and says that if she had not been in athletics, she would probably have been an English major because she had such a great respect for writers.

A good turn-out at meets was something she had grown to appreciate since there is not usually a crowd. With talent like Nancy Wellish here, though, those who enjoy diving are in for a show.

Rarely will one ever experience the pleasure of meeting a person with the natural warmth of Mike Eppley. Mike wants to be perceived as an "easy-going, relaxed-person" by his fellow Tigers. His God-given talents and tireless dedication have enabled him to excel in his athletic and intellectual endeavors. One might believe that after achieving so much Mike would be hard pressed to find much more to motivate himself. But as he said succinctly, "I just keep setting goals for myself and after I reach one, I just set more; it's a type of self-motivation."

So what is Mike Eppley, the person, truly like? Despite the successes, Mike remains a down-to-earth person. His favorite TV show is Hill Street Blues, and he enjoys reading Newsweek and GQ. When asked if he was given three wishes he replied, "... being 2 inches taller, general happiness, and having straight legs." Questioned on what famous non-athlete he would like to be he said, "Any rock star. I think it would be pretty neat getting up there and performing."

Eppley will not be missed by his opposition. He hopes on giving opposing professional football teams many headaches in the upcoming years. Despite whatever happens in the future, he says "What I'll remember most about Clemson ten years from now is the association of people, both the athletes and regular students."

*William Perry
Football*

William Perry has the distinction of being Clemson's first three-time All American. William (or Anthony, as he is referred to by his family) handles his priorities by obtaining an education, practicing football, and caring for his family on a day-to-day basis. "If I know I have to read a book then I just do it," says William.

He was nicknamed "Refrigerator" by Ray Brown who gave it to him after Brown saw Perry take up a whole elevator. Perry considers himself to be a very flexible person, "I can be any type of person, quiet or outgoing," says William. His favorite memory (along with many other Tigers) was winning the National Championships in the 1981 Orange Bowl against Nebraska.

Mr. Perry enjoys relaxing at home with his family. When Mr. Perry is not a Tiger on the field, he may be found looking through Family Circle magazine for a few tasty recipes or maybe dancing the night away with his wife at College Station.

When William Perry leaves and takes his extraordinary talents on to professional football, there will be a big hole created that Danny Ford will find very difficult to fill.

Lisa Bobby Tennis

Still only a junior, tennis standout Lisa Bobby knows what's ahead for her and won't quit till she gets it.

An important match that made a mark in Lisa was after she didn't improve for a year and was thinking about quitting the sport. But she continued working hard until she made it to the third round of a pro-qualifying draw.

(The best she's ever done).

When asked if there was a famous person she would like to meet she replied, "Joan Rivers, because of her ability to make people laugh." She enjoys reading People and other types of "gossip" magazines. If she was given three wishes she would want, "... the ability to always be happy with myself, have enough money, and find a man."

The image Lisa wants to project is that, "Tennis is only a part of me that I'm very proud of, but there's more to me," says Lisa. What's ahead for Lisa Bobby: "Pro tennis until I'm satisfied with what I've done."

*Peggy Caple
Basketball*

Clemson's women's basketball team had many talented players. Among them was Peggy Caple, a senior who will be missed in future years. Basketball took up much of Peggy's time, but she hoped to pledge a sorority and become involved in more campus activities next year since she would have played her four years of basketball, but still have a year to go in school.

Peggy started playing basketball when she was very young with her brothers in Maxton, North Carolina. She said that many people thought she was a boy at that age. She still had to prove herself to the boys, though. And that she did, and she was wanted by many schools. Peggy almost signed with the University of North Carolina, but fortunately for us, Clemson's coach impressed her mother and she came to this campus instead.

An outgoing personality was the trait Peggy would like people to notice about her first. She did not want people to think of her just as an athlete. She was an Industrial Arts major and would someday like to teach arts and crafts. She also had opportunities to play basketball in Italy or for the Women's Professional League here in the States.

Wherever she goes, Peggy will carry with her memories of the atmosphere and the people of Clemson.

*John Pawlowski
Baseball*

When John Pawlowski was young, he would incessantly drag his father outdoors to toss a baseball around. John's father was certainly overjoyed the day his son finally left for college.

John believes that the key to his success has been mainly due to hard work. One of his favorite memories has been accepting his admission to Clemson, a decision he looks back on with no regrets.

He admires Nolan Ryan, a pitcher with the Houston Astros, not only for his talents but also for his attitude towards baseball, and life in general.

What motivates John in his desire to "constantly improve himself." He also possesses the highly desirable quality of being able to accurately and honestly evaluate his weaknesses, and then strive hard to improve them.

John also sets the goals of the team above his own wants. An overall concern for others makes John Pawlowski the perfect leader.

*Reggie Pleasant
Football*

Reggie may be in the corner on the football field, but his admirable characteristics put him at the center of attention. This cornerback has an inherent friendliness which immediately surrounds you when you first meet him. His ability to stand out in a crowd will undoubtedly carry him to success. "Happiness is put above all else," says Reggie. He believes that success will fall into place after you have gained happiness.

Clemson has taught him quite a bit about hardwork and maintaining responsibilities. Trying to play football and maintain a good grade point average in Mechanical Engineering is no easy task. After one of these hard grueling days Reggie may be in front of the amphitheater watching the waterfall or strolling through the Horticulture Gardens, a peaceful and quiet place.

Reggie Pleasant has a lot of accomplishments here at Clemson from athletics to academics. He hopes to play for any type of professional football league after graduation and if not, then pursue a career in his major. His motto for life is that "I can because I believe that I have to." With this belief and the thankfulness to God for his abilities, Reggie Pleasant will be the success he wants to be.

Fellowship, socializing, learning and growing—that is what Greeks are all about. The fifteen fraternities and eight sororities on campus provide students with a wide variety of selection in the Greek system. A new sorority, Alpha Chi Omega was chartered in February to add to the choice.

Due to the raise in the drinking age, dry rush was put into effect. The fall semester was the first time alcohol was not allowed at rush parties. The ruling was not popular, however, as half of the fraternities violated the ruling during

Spring Rush.

Greeks provide several activities for students. Year round activities such as Derby Days, Dixie Day, Greek Week, Greek Day and Greek Sing keep everyone busy. Recreational activities are not the only things that make up these organizations. Last year alone the sororities on campus contributed approximately $16,000 to charity. The IFC organizes most of the fraternity functions including visits to local orphanages to play softball with the children.

Greeks

Fundraisers, mixers, rush, and Greek Week kept Greeks busy on campus and in the community. During this hectic schedule, they took time out to share in what fraternities and sororities are all about—unity and lifetime friendships.

The Greek's spirit was shown by their participation in the TAPS' third Greek

Photo Contest. Beta Theta Pi's were the overall winners for the third year. The theme of "Saturday Night Live" showed their enthusiasm and creativity. Winning the Best Sorority category were the sisters of Delta Gamma with their "jungle" theme. "Pi Kappa Blues" featuring the brothers of Pi Kappa Phi won the Best Fraternity category.

AKA

The Lambda Theta chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha worked hard in 1984-85 to have a very successful year. Fall was filled with many activities — a Halloween party for area children, Thanksgiving baskets for needy families, a fund-raiser for abused children, and to end the semester, their annual fashion show. AKA's capped off the year with their annual skate-a-thon to raise money for a scholarship to an incoming freshman from the Clemson area. The sisters also had several fund-raising parties to donate money to the Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation. To end their year of productive activities, the sisters of AKA hosted their first annual Pink Ice Ball.

The Zeta Nu chapter of Alpha Delta Pi worked hard in 1984-85 and should be proud of their many achievements. They were named overall winner of the Dixie Day competition in the spring. Fall was filled with a number of activities — First Friday Parade, Tigerama, and Derby Days to name a few. The sisters worked the entire year raising money for their philanthropy — the Ronald McDonald houses for terminally ill children. They capped off the year with their annual spring teeter-totter marathon. Social events included an alumni brunch, a scholarship tea, Sadie Hawkins dance, and a formal to keep things busy. Still, ADPi's always found time to support Clemson activities with many sisters participating in a variety of activities.

Alpha Gamma Rho is a national social-professional fraternity for men studying in any of the agricultural sciences. AGR builds better men by encouraging participation in fraternity and campus activities. AGR's can be found participating in most all department clubs in the College of Agriculture and many of the brothers hold positions of leadership in these clubs.

Alpha Gamma Rho has been successful in the First Friday Parade and Homecoming for many years and continued their success by placing third and second, respectively, in each event. AGR also sponsors a fund raiser for Multiple Sclerosis each year. Last year's competition against the Sigma Nu's from South Carolina yielded a victory for AGR and MS. The brothers of Alpha Gamma Rho take pride in their work and accomplishments and hope their association with Clemson will continue to grow in the future.

The Eta Pi chapter of Alpha Tau Omega was once again very busy on campus. The ATO-Tiger Paw calendar featuring the beautiful co-eds of Clemson continued to be very popular on campus. The ATO's were also busy the week of Homecoming as they presented a skit in Tigerama and constructed a motion display. Social service projects were another interest of the fraternity as the brothers continued to support efforts to help less fortunate people. The school year was highlighted by parties on football weekends, pre-game cookouts, mixers, rush week and Greek week. The brothers were supported throughout the year by their beautiful Little Sisters who were always there to help out. The ATO's held their annual Founder's Day Formal in March, and after exams they celebrated the beginning of summer in Myrtle Beach.

Holding true to its credo, "Manly deeds, scholarship and love for all mankind," the brothers of Pi Alpha chapter worked diligently throughout the year by presenting such programs such as the "Save Fisk University" rally, the Martin Luther King Commemoration service, the Miss Black and Gold Pageant, and Founders Week. Because emphasis is placed on service rather than social activities, the Alpha's continuously strove to better the University and community through projects such as a fund-raiser for the Clemson Daycare Center. Assisted by the ever faithful ladies of Black and Gold, Alpha remains "First of all, servants to all; we shall transcend all."

The Delta Nu chapter of Beta Theta Pi remained active throughout the school year sponsoring many events and participating in numerous extracurricular activities. The first Annual Alumni Softball Game, which was held in September, was extremely successful. Most of the Beta's functions revolved around the spring semester, however. Beta's sponsored Dixie Day which included the Miss Magnolia Pageant and the Dixie Day games. Also held in the spring were the Beta Masters Golf Tournament and the Little Sisters softball game. Beta's are extremely proud of their Little Sisters program which functions as an intricate part of the fraternity.

Beta's participate in Greek Day and many intramural

Alpha Chi Delta chapter of Chi Psi is a fraternity dedicated to excellence. Chi Psi's field many fine athletic teams in all intramural and Interfraternity Council play. Chi Psi's maintained a full social calendar with Alumni drop-ins at football games, the annual Christmas party with the Little Sisters, and the Spring Formal at the end of the year. One of Chi Psi's major activities is the involvement during Homecoming with the building of a still display. Every fall Chi Psi enjoys participating in Delta Gamma's Anchor Splash.

Chi Psi continued to have an

The Psi Kappa chapter of Chi Omega began the year with a flurry of activity and a great deal of excitement as 115 sisters welcomed fifty super pledges to the sorority. The Chi Omega's raised money for Muscular Dystrophy by holding their annual Tub-a-thon with the SAE's. In addition, the sisters visited Clemson Downs to spend a fun-filled day with some spirited senior citizens. Their social calendar was filled with events such as Derby Day and Dixie Day, the January formal, mixers galore, Father-Daughter weekend, Mother-

Daughter tea, and their traditional fall and spring blowouts. Many Chi Omegas sparked this year with various awards and honors. In fact, two sisters, Liz Raubolt and Kate Kenney, won the titles of Miss Clemson and Miss North Carolina-U.S.A. respectively, making the Chi O's very proud indeed.

The Zeta Theta chapter of Delta Delta Delta has been on campus since 1970. With 123 active sisters and fifty pledges, a total of 173 members, they were the largest sorority on campus. In the spring Tri-Delta awarded two academic scholarships to outstanding women on campus. Money for the scholarships was raised by a corndog sale during Homecoming and a craft auction in November. The Superdance, which they co-sponsored with Pi Kappa Alpha, was a big success. All of the proceeds were donated to Muscular Dystrophy. Throughout the year Tri-Delta's were involved in the First Friday Parade, in which they were awarded second place, Derby Day, the Pledge Formal, Dixie Day, in which they won third place overall, and Miss Cynthia Young, a sister, was crowned Miss Magnolia.

Delta Sigma Theta is a public service sorority which performs many service projects throughout the school year. In addition to participation in local projects, Delta's also take part in projects that are sponsored by the National Chapter. Some of their service projects planned for the year included bi-monthly visits to the Oconee Geriatric Center, Saturday School for community children, and fund-raisers for Muscular Dystrophy.

The Epsilon Kappa chapter of Delta Gamma started their third year at Clemson by winning first place in the First Friday parade with their version of "Zap the Apps." The next big event was Derby Days and then Manhunt — a "crush party" where the guys are invited anonymously.

In November, Delta Gamma hosted the third annual Anchor Splash — a swim meet for the fraternities. The money raised from the Pre-Splash party and the Mr. Legs contest was donated to their philanthropies — Sight Conservation, Aid to the Blind, and Grants and Loans. All the fraternities had a great time competing for the Spirit Award and Mr. Anchor Splash.

Other Delta Gamma social events included the Christmas party, the Cream Rose Formal in February, and the annual Heartless Hannah Luau party before finals in the Spring.

Kappa Alpha order involved themselves in a colorful variety of activities throughout the year. Muscular Dystrophy benefited greatly from the various KA fund-raisers.

The brothers of the Delta Omicron chapter also enjoyed an extremely busy social life. During the fall, each home game was celebrated with a band party along with the December Christmas Party held with the Little Sisters and the annual Sunrise Mixer with the Chi Omega's. The highlight of the fall was Mountain Weekend, enjoyed by all brothers and their dates. The spring gave the brothers the biggest party of the year. The "Old South Ball" held at Hilton Head Island also included a golf tournament and a celebration of the anti-bellum South. Visits to Camden for the Carolina Cup as well as other parties rounded out the spring.

Kappa Alpha Theta had a wonderful year filled with numerous activities. Fall semester began with a successful rush as ninety-four sisters welcomed forty-nine pledges. They quickly became friends as they began working on the First Friday Parade float and planned for the annual Incredible Hunk Party. Later in October, the sisters enjoyed the Derby Day games and dance. After cheering for the Tigers this season, everyone was happy to relax and spend a weekend at Arrowmont Camp in North Carolina. A Secret Sis Christmas Party ended the semester before studying for final exams began.

To brush away those winter blues, Theta's had their formal at the Hyatt in Greenville. Dixie Day provided Theta's with a way to meet girls in other sororities in the spring. The sisters sponsored a Swim-a-thon to benefit their national philanthropy. Awards were given at a delicious end-of-the-year dinner. Both semesters were liberally dotted with mixers, study sessions, and visits to a local child development center. Theta's were active year-round on campus in student government, as Little Sisters to various fraternities, and in numerous honorary organizations.

The Kappa Lambda chapter of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity received its charter on the 16th of October in 1980 with the motto of "Kappa men hold true to service and betterment of mankind." The brothers of the Kappa Lambda chapter sponsored service activities such as a voter registration drive and a scholarship fund for an incoming black male freshman. The brothers also sponsored several successful parties and get-togethers.

The Nupes celebrated their Founder's Day during Kappa Week, October 14 through October 20. The week featured several service projects such as a game show in Edgar's to raise money for the Abused Children's Fund and the collection of clothes for the Salvation Army. James B. Hardy III was the speaker for the Founder's Day Banquet at the Ramada Inn. The week concluded with a coin drive for Muscular Dystrophy. The brothers also organized their women's auxiliary, the Death Valley Diamonds.

Epsilon Mu chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma received national as well as local recognition last year. Kappa's received a number one ranking in membership nationally in addition to honorable mention in personnel and scholarship. On this campus, the Kappa's were number one in scholarship among all sororities.

For their philanthropy project, the Kappas competed with the USC Kappa's in selling the annual Kappa Calendar for Multiple Sclerosis. They also held an ice cream Sunday dessert for underprivileged children. Another event was the annual scholarship tea where Kappa's entertained faculty members at the President's home. The Kappa Kidnap, Christmas party, and Formal were some of the chapter's favorite events.

Kappa Sigma's social calendar was as varied and colorful as its members. Fall semester parties centered around Rush and home football games with Homecoming week being the most exciting. In addition to these special events, several mixers, cookouts, and informal gatherings with the fraternity's Little Sisters and campus sororities were enjoyed by everyone. The traditional "Sweetheart Ball" formal and fraternity resort house weekend provided many memorable moments during the cold winter months of the second semester. The coming of springtime brought lots of warmth, but also the excitement and spirited competition of Greek Week and the Greek Day Games. As always, throughout the year, the Kappa Sigma bi-annual Buckwheat functions resulted in unique social events. Just like the plant that they are nicknamed for, the "Kudzo Kids" seem to come back stronger and stronger each year.

Phi Beta Sigma

ΦΒΣ

Omicron Lambda chapter of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Incorporated was established on campus April 15, 1984. Since its inception, the dynamic young men that comprise this chapter have strived to uphold the high ideals of Sigma and further its cause. The three cardinal principles of Sigma — Brotherhood, Scholarship, and Service — are what these young men use to guide them in their daily activities.

In the short time that Phi Beta Sigma has been a functioning entity on campus, they have held numerous fund raising activities in order to make humanitarian donations to the Muscular Dystrophy Association and the Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation.

Supporting charitable organizations was one of Omicron Lambda Chapter's priorities. The men of Sigma were also involved in acting as a cohesive factor among the other black Greek organizations. They also hoped to enlighten their brothers and sisters on the necessity of becoming involved in the community.

On September 17, 1984, the IFC approved the application of Phi Alpha Sigma to join with the only national fraternity founded in South Carolina, Pi Kappa Phi.

Pi Kappa Phi participated in community events such as the Greenville Health Fair and project PUSH (Play Units for Severely Handicapped). PUSH is the only philanthropic project sponsored in whole by a national social fraternity.

Pi Kappa Phi's social calendar featured such events as the Chicken Kickin' Barbeque, Valentine's Day Formal Dance, Mountain Retreats, and other social functions.

The brothers of Phi Delta Theta enjoyed a wide range of activities throughout the year. In intramural sports, the Phi Delt's were very competitive, especially in soccer and softball. Their annual Spring Fever

Run to benefit Lou Gehrig's Disease was a great success. Other community service projects included the teeter-totter-athon with the ADPI's and a party for Whitten Village.

The Phi Delt's also enjoyed an excellent social calendar. Fall semester consisted of rush parties, football cookouts, sorority mixers, and the annual Christmas bash held before exams. The Valentine Ball and the Annual Pre-Masters Classic with the Tri-Delts highlighted the spring semester. At the end of the year the Phi Delt's enjoyed the Spring Formal and the week after exams in Myrtle Beach.

Phi Gamma Delta is one of the strongest national fraternities with chapters all across the United States and several chapters in Canada. Fiji prides itself on its brotherhood, both graduate and undergraduate. This brotherhood is shown by strong graduate support throughout the year.

In the fall, the Fiji's participate in the Homecoming float competition and throw a formal dance the night of the game. In the spring the Fiji's turn their attention to their annual Easter Egg Hunt for elementary school students in the area. The semester is capped off with the annual Norris Pig Dinner for graduates and the famous Fiji Island Weekend bash.

Theta Chi moved into its fourteenth year with several social and civic events. The brothers and their guests enjoyed attending a variety of parties which included "The

Mr. Bubble Party," PJ-PJ Party and the now famous "Return to Guyana Party" complete with tainted punch.

Theta Chi was formed around its motto of "the Helping Hand" and in keeping with this, they volunteered their services to the Heart Fund by collecting donations at area shopping centers and working on the Fourth Annual Fall Festival, sponsored by Helping Hands to raise money for abused and neglected children. Another event for Theta Chi was the semi-annual camping party and retreat. In a wilderness setting, pledges and brothers get to know each other, and the fraternity gets a chance to set goals for the upcoming semester.

Brothers and alumni gather at the end of the year at the Red Carnation ball to socialize and recall past times with Theta Chi.

Leading the brothers through the year were: president, Jim Fairchild; vice president, David Grossman; treasurer, Chris Williams; secretary, Chuck Zollinger; 1st guard, Scott Glass; pledge marshal, Andy Partridge.

Also included in activities was a rush retreat with the Pi Phi's of Georgia. Their formal was in Gatlinburg during the month of February. A D.J. party with the theme of "Let's Go Crazy" was also held. They held a fireside gathering at East Bank with the Sisters and new pledges.

Girls, girls, girls — that's what Derby Days is all about — sorority girls gathering together for friendly competition and lots of fun.

On Friday, October 5, hundreds of girls met at the Rugby field to participate in the Derby Day games. Such events as "izzy dizzy" where five girls alternately race twenty-five yards to a bat, spin around it ten times, and attempt to return, as well as "flour power," where a group of girls from each sorority dig for a key in a pile of flour, were played. The victorious sorority from each game received smiles, hugs, and points.

After the games, the girls had a few hours of relaxation before heading to the National Armory for the Derby Day dance. There they were entertained by the band Threshold, who did an excellent imitation of Prince.

At the dance trophies were awarded to the sorority who had collected the most points from the games. Delta Delta Delta won first place, Kappa Alpha Theta was awarded second, and Delta Gamma placed third. The Derby Queen, Miss Sandy Williams of Kappa Alpha Theta, was also announced.

Sponsored by Sigma Chi, Derby Days is designed to make a profit for charity. Through selling ads, penny votes for Derby Queen, and selling tickets to the dance, Sigma Chi raised $1800 to be given to the American Cancer Society and Wallace Village, a home for children with slight brain damage. Sigma Chi was pleased with Derby Days and is looking forward to next year.

One of the highlights of the year for Greeks is Greek Day, which is held each spring. A variety of events are held throughout the year and culminate in Greek Day. The Interfraternity Council designates winners in several categories, including the Tigerama skit, Homecoming display, academics and Greek Sing.

When Greek Day finally arrives, Budweiser trucks provide plenty of kegs for the Greeks and their dates. Excitement builds as the fraternities wait to hear the winner. This year however, rain stopped the competition and no winner was announced for Greek Day. Congratulations to Greek Week winners, Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Dixie Day

By Kat Stivers

It's a warm, sunny weekend and you walk by the soccer field to see students laughing, playing games, and throwing beer. This is Clemson's sorority celebration called Dixie Day.

Throughout the spring semester the sororities compete in athletic events leading to Dixie Day. Awards are given to the sororities who have collected the most points in such sports as softball, basketball, tennis, and spades. Chi Omega was awarded first place for athletics, Alpha Delta Pi was second, and Delta Gamma placed third. Along with sports, an academic award was given. This went to Kappa Kappa Gamma.

the Miss Magnolia pageant. Tri Delt's Cynthia Young was crowned Miss Magnolia 1984, while Kelley Haulbrook was first runner up. During different intervals of the pageant the sororities presented their theme song. The winner of this competition, called "Sorority Sing," was Alpha Delta Pi.

Dixie Day Dance was held the evening prior to the main event. The band, Generation, performed at the Seneca Armory.

Official Dixie Day began the next afternoon with an egg-tossing game and was followed with other competitions. After the games were over, the overall winners of Dixie Day were

ME. organizacion; ML. organizatio . . . 4. any unified, consolidated group of elements; systemized whole; especially, a body of persons organized for some specific purpose, as a club, union, or society . . . Organizations are a vital part of campus life. They provide the student with a sense of belonging, plus a chance for socializing, learning, and growing. There are approximately 240 recognized organizations on the Clemson campus. Each of these falls into one of the following categories: Professionals, Honorary, Fine Arts, Military, Student Government, Spirit, Social, Media, Special Interest, and Religion, and appeals to a variety of students. Students join organizations for many different reasons—Some see them as an opportunity to become better acquainted with professors and future employment prospects, while others desire to meet people with similar interests.

The Agronomy Club was started at Clemson in 1965. It is open to all people majoring or minoring in Agronomy and those students with a special interest in agronomic farming. The major functions include participation in the Southeast Regional Agronomy Conference, a chicken BBQ, an annual Seniors banquet, and participation in Soil Judging contests.

The Clemson chapter of the Associate Student Chapter of the American Institute of Architects serves the design students in a variety of ways. Its main purpose is to broaden the architectural experience of each student in the College of Architecture. The ASC/AIA sponsors special lectures, films, and workshops, as well as extracurricular design opportunities. This year, the chapter secured a lounge in the architecture studio for students, and the members helped to design and finish it.

The chapter also provides members with the opportunity to meet and learn from established professionals by sponsoring trips to regional and national conferences. The ASC/AIA strives to enhance relations between classes and disciplines in the college. This is done through weekly newsletters, a

THE KEY TO COLLEGE OPPORTUNITIES

by Andrea Barfield

Organizations — one of the many ways to become involved in college life. These clubs provide new and continuing students with an opportunity to meet new people, to establish contacts for future employment, to learn about the University, and to have a good time.

While a lot of students desire to get involved in various groups, many are confused about how this is done. Some will wander about endlessly never quite making it to a meeting; others will take the initiative (either alone or in the "buddy system") and attend one.

A few years ago Student Government realized there had to be a better way to get students involved with what Clemson has to offer. Thus, the tradition of Organizations Day began.

At the beginning of each Fall semester, the Organizations committee sponsors an official day for the various clubs on campus. The purpose is to allow those interested a chance to meet and talk to club members.

There are approximately 240 recognized Organizations here at the University. Each is placed under one of the following categories: Fine Arts, Honorary, Media, Military, Political, Professional, Religious, Service, or Spirit. They are open to any student with these interests, with the exception of a few of the Honoraries.

In the past, Organizations Day was held on Bowman Field. This year the setting was changed to Senior Walk, between Riggs Hall and Tillman Hall. This change was to encourage more students to stop and look on their way to and from classes. The strategy appears to have been successful, as an estimated 4000 participated. This marked the biggest turnout of students to ever take part in this Day.

Alpha Epsilon Delta is a national premedical Honor society. The main objective is to stimulate an appreciation of the importance of premedical education and to promote cooperation and contacts between medical or premedical students and educators. This, in turn, would develop an effective program of premedical education. Chapter activities included meetings where subjects of interest to premedical students were discussed by faculty members, physicians, and qualified personnel from professional schools. The chapter also took field trips to several medical colleges in the area.

Alpha Lambda Delta is a national society which honors high scholastic achievement during the first year in college. Membership is open to all freshmen who meet the scholastic requirement of a 3.5 cumulative GPR during their first semester or first year here at Clemson. Originally, Alpha Lambda Delta was a society only for women, but in 1975, men were also allowed to join. During the year members worked on a publication to aid

The Kappa chapter of Alpha Tau Alpha was chartered in 1932. The Agricultural Education honor fraternity is open to both undergraduate and graduate students majoring or minoring in Agricultural Education. Invitations are issued during both the fall and spring semesters.

Several members represent the chapter at the National ATA Conclave held in conjunction with the National FFA Convention in Kansas City, Missouri. During the spring, ATA held its banquet and recognized the outstanding senior and underclassmen of the group. The chapter also granted honorary membership to individuals who had contributed to the advancement of Agricultural Education.

Beta Alpha Psi, an organization formed in 1983, recognized the Accounting majors. To be eligible, a student must have been a declared Accounting major, have completed nine total hours of Accounting courses, and three hours (of the total nine) in intermediate Accounting. To continue membership, a student must have maintained a 3.2 GPR in Accounting and an overall GPR of 3.0. Beta Alpha Psi visited CPA firms as well as performing many service projects on campus and in the community. One such service was a VITA program which helped people in the community with their tax returns at no charge.

Chi Epsilon is the national Civil Engineering honor society composed of juniors and seniors in the top one-third of their class. The Clemson chapter was founded in 1974. Each semester the members published the "Chi Epsilon News" — a news letter highlighting the students, faculty, and alumni of Chi Epsilon and the Civil Engineering department. Chi Epsilon, along with the American Society of Civil Engineers, sponsored the annual Homecoming picnic for all Civil Engineering alumni and friends. In addition, recent projects included a transportation study for Pickens, a speakers series, and surveying paths for the disabled at a local recreational facility.

Kappa Delta Pi is an International Honor Society in Education. The Mu Epsilon Chapter was established at the University in 1972. Its major purpose was to encourage excellence in scholarship, high personal standards, improvement in teacher preparation, distinction in achievement, and contributions to education. Education majors having a 3.4 cumulative GPR, with junior standing, and having completed a minimum of 30 hours were eligible for membership. Fifteen new members were initiated during the fall semester. There were at least four meetings each year, including an initiation ceremony and a recognition reception for outstanding seniors. Other activities included fund raising, participation in regional conferences and international conventions, and the presentation of awards for excellence in education at the College of Education Honors Day Program.

Keramos is a national Honorary Ceramic Engineering Society. It was founded in 1958 when the formal petitioning for a charter received approval. The functions of the society were honor, service, character, scholarship, and promotion." The society served a dual purpose. Not only did it provide recognition and honor to those of scholarship and character, but it also promoted a professional attitude. The requirements for induction to Keramos included 2.3 GPR for seniors, 2.6 GPR for juniors, 2.8 GPR for sophomores, and an exemplary character. The society each year awards a rising senior and junior with the Keramos Merit Award for outstanding achievement.

Mu Beta Psi was founded as a music fraternity at N.C. State College in 1925. It established its Delta Chapter here in 1937. The purpose of the fraternity was to promote better fellowship among the musicians of the various musical groups in a college and among the musicians of different schools.

Eligibility for Mu Beta Psi membership was based on participation in one of the campus musical groups or an outstanding contribution to the advancement of music at Clemson. Throughout the year the brothers sponsored welcoming drop-ins for new members of the bands and chorus, they ushered the University Concert and Chamber Music Series, and performed numerous other services on campus.

for any students needing help. They also sponsored with the Continuing Engineering Education department, review sessions for the EIT exam. They are now in the process of starting an area alumni chapter. To meet the expenses for this project, they sponsored "The Great Book Giveaway," a drawing for a $100 gift certificate from the Clemson University Bookstore. Any extra funds raised from this project will be used towards a scholarship fund for Engineering students.

In 1906, at the University of Washington, the Forestry Honorary Society of Xi Sigma Pi was founded. The purpose was to maintain

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

By Mark Wilson

The year in Student Government started with elections in March. New officers selected their staffs and began plans for work in the upcoming year.

Immediate attention went to the incoming freshmen as Student Government planned slide shows, skits, and general information for orientation. The campus media, other campus organizations, and even a performance from part of the Tiger Band highlighted the summer's shows.

With the goal of making Student Government a better service, the registration answer program was started. This involved selected guides to show students, particularly new ones, through registration.

Some of the biggest programs that Student Government sponsored included the Business Fair, Organizations Day, and refrigerator rentals.

The various committees of Student Government offered different activities. Speaker's Bureau brought Leonard Nimoy, Judy Belushi, Father John Nicola, and Shere Hite to campus. Research and Development gave voter registration information and provided help in obtaining Absentee Ballots. The Judiciary Branch continued to give students trial by peers, a chance to appeal traffic tickets, and a wake-up call if the Saturday morning towing crew had targeted your automobile. Senate provided direct representation for all students to formulate student opinion.

A new committee, Special Events, put on Spirit Blitz '84 that featured a whole weekend of activities for students. Central Spirit painted paws, gave out balloons, and coordinated giving out 50,000 pompon shakers for the USC game.

Overall, students got more new services and enjoyed the continuation of such activities as legal aid, Homecoming, and shuttle services. Increased input with the administration marked the years tone, as well as the establishment of ad-hoc committees on freshmen activities, handicapped students, and the change in the drinking age.

In short, Student Government at least tried to be everything you could want in a student service, and more!

Pershing Rifles, Company C-4, was founded at Clemson College in 1939 under a charter from the National Headquarters at Lincoln, Nebraska. Company C-4 is celebrating its 45th year at Clemson, and the present class is striving to uphold the standards set forth by the original class in 1939.

The twenty members of Pershing Rifles in Company C-4 have set a high goal for themselves; Service projects, parades, and winning the Fourth Regimental Drill Meet in February. In addition, they plan on traveling to New Orleans for the Mardi Gras festival to represent Clemson in the numerous parades held during the festival.

Although based on the highest military ideals, there is much more to the members of Pershing Rifles. Through the long hours of preparing for performances and competitions, friendships are formed that last through many hardships and far past graduation. The qualifications for entry are strict, but those who can call themselves Pershing Riflemen have met the most strict qualification of all — excellence!!!

Editor's Note: Campus organizations were asked to submit a short history to be included in the article. The omission of other Military clubs in this article is not due to prejudice or favoritism, but merely the failure of these organizations to submit their histories.

RELIGIOUS

The ministry of Campus Crusade for Christ began at Clemson University more than fifteen years ago. A group of students, motivated by a number of Crusade conferences they had attended, desired to see their lives count in a significant way. They banded together and began the evangelistic movement here. Through the years, there have been thousands of students who have been confronted with the claims of Jesus Christ and involved in various bible studies and discipleship groups offered through the staff and fellow students.

From its inception, the Campus Crusade for Christ distinctives have always been the same. They desire to win men and women to Christ, build them in their faith, and send them out to reach others.

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes, an outreach program for Jesus Christ, serves athletes, coaches, and students. The Thursday night meetings concentrate on a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. Other programs are Tuesday night bible study, Monday night get togethers, seasonal picnics, FCA day, a retreat to Awanita, and a coaches breakfast. FCA members travel to area high schools, churches, and youth retreats to take the Good News of Christ to the world.

SOCIAL

Originated in 1977 as a fresh alternative to fraternity life, B-5 Social Organization was open to all of the residents of B-5 Johnstone Hall. B-5 also consisted of non-resident members who received a two-thirds majority vote. In providing activities for its members, B-5 sponsored theme parties, an annual Valentines' Formal, and intramural teams in softball, football, and soccer. B-5 also supported campus-wide events such as The First Friday Parade (B-5 finished in second place in the Dorm Division for the 1984 parade), the Homecoming Pageant, the Miss Clemson Pageant, and Spirit Blitz.

Tau Upsilon Gamma is a hall brotherhood for residents of C-5 and C-6 of Johnstone Hall. Just formed this past year, activities included sponsoring someone for the Miss Clemson Pageant, an annual Halloween party, Jungle party, and various mixers.

Tri Chi Brotherhood was started at Clemson in 1976 by Steve Marsh, Larry Stevens, and Dennis Clark. This organization was established in order to provide an alternative to the traditional fraternity. XXX provided an opportunity for good friends to participate in various activities within a casual and mostly non-structured setting.

Participation in intramural sports was one of the primary activities of Tri Chi. The members enjoyed getting together to participate in team-oriented sports such as softball, football, and basketball. Other activities included parties, cookouts, and reunions. Each semester XXX took part in the Escort service and in the Marathon Football Game, held each fall to raise money for charities.

Any male undergraduate at Clemson was eligible to join Tri Chi. Most members came to XXX through mutual friends or word of mouth. Members were not required to pay large dues and meetings were usually informal.

In September of 1983, student body president David Stalnaker and IPTAY Executive Secretary Joe Turner recommended the IPTAY Student Advisory Committee as an arm of the student government. The purpose of the board was to improve relations between IPTAY and the student body.

The composition of this group is three sophomores, three juniors, three seniors — plus the student body president and vice-president, the chairperson of the Athletic Affairs Committee of the student senate, the TAPS editor, the TIGER editor, and the WSBF business manager. In addition, the IPTAY president appoints four other board members to serve with himself bringing the Board of Directors representation to five members.

The main purpose of the Advisory Board is to provide a student link to IPTAY. Thus, trying to alleviate the misconception that many students have about this group.

The Student Alumni Council was formed in January, 1973 in order to promote the interests, ideals, goals, and services of the Clemson University Alumni Association, to encourage the involvement of Clemson students in this organization, and to serve as an interpretive voice of the student body to the Alumni National Council. This objective is most clearly depicted in the Student Alumni Council motto — “The link between students and alumni.”

Through its projects, the SAC introduces students to the Alumni Association as well as providing an invaluable service to Clemson University. SAC sponsors the prestigious Alumni Master Teacher Award. This annual award recognizes an outstanding educator for his or her work in the classroom. The

SPIRIT

The Bengal Babes were a group of female students involved with the football recruiting program. These girls provided tours for football prospects and their parents, display banners at Mauldin Hall and Schilleter Dining Hall before games, plus numerous other functions.

This was the second season for the Mat Cats. The purpose of this group was to increase the morale of the wrestling team and improve fan attendance at the matches.

The main objective of Central Spirit was to coordinate the activities of all the spirit groups so that everyone was working together. Central Spirit painted tiger paws on faces during football games and sponsored pep rallies and other projects to promote spirit.

The Block "C" Club was an athletic club which recognized and supported every sport this year. All members of Block "C" were required to have earned a letter in a sport.

This Sixth Man Club officially changed their name to Rabble Rousers this year. This organization supported both men's and women's basketball by cheering at games, making posters, and other coaches' requests.

The Golf Club had a good year as it expanded its membership considerably. The club was headed by Mark Cooper and Carl Berry who served as president and vice-president, respectively. The club offers reduced rates at Keowee Keys and a trip to the Masters each year for its members. The club also treats its members to biannual tournaments and pizza parties, as well as a tour through the Dunlop Plant in Westminster. The club sponsored a long drive contest for the public in the spring. Last year new events included the first annual sponsoring of a contestant in the Miss Clemson pageant.

The Sailing Club was open to anyone, year around, interested in the art of sailing. As a social organization, the club sponsored its annual Oyster Roast, Reggae party, and Pig Roast, as well as Sail Days. Its intercollegiate racing team competed against other schools as far away as St. Petersburg, Florida, and they qualified for their regional championship. The Club added six new Vanguard 420's to its fleet of refurbished Coronado 15's. The club members were allowed to use the boats, deck, and equipment whenever they desired.

In the fall of 1984, the Clemson University Women's Soccer Club was recognized as a funded organization by Student Government.

The University Chorus was officially formed in 1969 with the formation of the Department of Music. Since then, the Chorus has grown into a large and diversified organization. The University Chorus was a formal concert ensemble, dedicated to the study and performance of a wide variety of choral music and emphasized developing a high degree of excellence both musically and from the standpoint of expressive communication with audiences.

Under the direction of Mr. William Campbell, the Chorus performed many functions on and off campus. They sang during pre-game ceremonies of all home football games and during halftime of the Homecoming game against Duke. They performed at two formal concerts in Tillman Hall and on tour in the Hampton-Mt. Pleasant-Hilton Head area of South Carolina. The chorus also sang Christmas Carols in Harcombe Plaza and a small contingent sang the National Anthem at all home basketball games.

Among other choral ensembles are the Men and Women's Glee Clubs. These groups performed at university functions such as banquets, dinners and also for visiting dignitaries and VIP's. Membership was on a voluntary basis and also served to expand the reading abilities of the performers. Concert literature included traditional glee club songs based heavily on harmonies.

A group that was more suited for formal large scale entertainment was the 4:30 Thursday Singers. The Singers, which are more jazz and Broadway oriented, served not only as entertainment, but also as a public relations group for Clemson. They participated in a show choir festival at Winthrop college, the Miss Clemson pageant, Regional Scouts Convention in Greenville, and the Mid-Carolina Electric Cooperative in Lexington, South Carolina. The Singers also performed for the visiting German ambassador to the United States.

The Madrigal Choir performed Renaissance type music. At the second annual Madrigal Dinner, the singers donned Elizabethan costumes and hosted the public in a feast of food and music. During the spring semester, the choir expanded into a chamber choir which performed Madrigal-style music, also.

The Clemson Dancers provided an outlet for those students interested in dance. Membership was open to anyone who wished to further his or her ability in this medium. They met once a month and coordinated classes that were available for all students' participation. Classes ranged from beginner to advanced, and clogging to aerobics.

The performing part of the Dancers was the Kinetic Theater. They performed at least once a semester in Daniel Auditorium. During the fall semester, the Kinetic Theater performed their version of the Broadway musical "Cats."

The Clemson Players was an organization devoted to the production of live theater. They performed many one-acts, plays, and musicals. Last year, the Players were invited to perform their production of "American Buffalo" at Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

This year, alumnus Larry Hembree returned as guest director for the Players production of "Come Back To The Five And Dime Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean." The play was a great success on campus as was their production of "Notes of a Family." Another play was surrounded by controversy as their production of "Equus" was censored because of nudity. Therefore, the nude scenes were performed by actors in flesh-colored body suits.

The Gospel Choir was composed of students who enjoy singing gospel music. The group, which was formed in 1979, performed for the Martin Luther King, Jr. Commemoration in Tillman Hall, at Student Day at the Golden View Baptist Church, and at Francis Marion and Winthrop Colleges. They also attended a workshop with choirs from Central Wesleyan and Winthrop and performed a joint concert with them in Tillman Auditorium. The Choir also serves as recruitment instrument for blacks for the university and serves as a spiritual, entertainment, and cultural outlet for its members. The Choir also hosted the Fourth Annual Gospel Explosion in Tillman with a high school choir from North Carolina.

The Jazz Ensemble, under the direction of Dr. Richard Goodstein, was a group of student-musicians interested in learning more about the jazz-Big Band medium. To join the ensemble, a student had to audition for his or her seat and once selected, had to also participate in the Basketball Pep Band.

The Jazz Ensemble performed two formal concerts on campus and also had a tour planned.

The Basketball Pep Band was comprised of members of the Jazz Ensemble plus expanded instrumentation for more upbeat, modern music. Directed by Dr. Richard Goodstein, the Pep Band performed at all men's home games and selected women's home games. Bandsmen who were not in the Jazz Ensemble also had to audition for seating. The Pep Band also traveled to Atlanta to play at the ACC Tournament at the Omni.

For those students who were interested in more serious music, the Symphonic Band provided such an outlet. Members of the Symphonic Band studied and preformed concert literature from Pre-Medieval to modern music, with selections from Broadway, marches, and even novelties. Instrumentation was selected to provide a well-balanced ensemble.

in the Charleston and Sumter areas, and at Spring Graduation Ceremonies in Tillman Hall.

The largest and most visible, not to mention audible, organization on campus by far was Tiger Band. The conglomerate of some 260 members performed at all Tiger football games, the annual First Friday Parade, pep rallies and Tigerama.

Led by Drum Majors Eric Foster and Cindy Morris, the 1984 edition of Tiger Band had an active year. The band had the opportunity to perform at halftime of an N.F.L. game between the Atlanta Falcons and Houston Oilers. However, the game was played at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium the day after the Tigers were defeated by the Bulldogs and the band was not well received. The band also attended, as spectators, the 1984 DCI World Championships also held in Atlanta at Georgia Tech's Grant Field.

Members of the band also had the privilege to meet the man who wrote "The Song That Shakes The Southland." Dr. Paul Yoder, who wrote the arrangement of Tiger Rag that Tiger Band uses, visited Clemson during homecoming and directed both Tiger Band and the Alumni Band in Tiger Rag.

Tiger Band also had the rare privilege to play Hail to the Chief for the President of the United States. During his 1984 re-election campaign, President Reagan made a stop at Greenville Tech and Tiger Band, along with some local high school bands, was invited to attend and perform for the President, his entourage, and the public.

Here within the next 172 pages lies the passage of history. This record includes the names and faces of the students that took the time to be remembered in this history. Also included is a memorial page to remember those students, faculty, and staff members who are no longer with us. All of these will be remembered in the years that lie ahead.

Putting together this history began back in the summer when the photo dates were set. Advertising began as soon as students arrived in August. After the photos were taken and a copy of each was sent to TAPS, many hours of labelling and section designing had to be completed. All of this work made it possible for you to have a lifetime reference of those people you shared your college life with.

The final pages of this book include the Senior Directory, the Index, and the TAPS' Senior Staff and credits, all of which are in the history of your life.

Where the Tigerband Plays

Once upon a time, in a place not far away, lived a great big family who was very happy. They had a mother and a father, and two grandfathers, Gram-pas Cook and Goodstein. They lived in a house called the "Y", and their last name was Tigerband. The Tigerbands loved to go outside and play, so Cindy and Eric took the children to play. The children loved their playground very much, and they had a great time marching around, making lots of "noise", and playing chart games.

One day, all the children went on vacation. While they were gone, a big monster came and ate up the playground and left it dry. When the family returned, they were crushed to discover that they could not play. They were very sad because the new playground was too far away and had no trees to climb. They used the new field for a while, but soon returned to the old. The field was dusty and it made it difficult to breathe. One day, it began to rain and the field became a swamp. The family decided to wait until August to return to their field and hoped it would be pretty again. If it was not, they would just ask Uncle Iptay for some artificial turf.

COLOPHON

The 1985 TAPS was printed by the Delmar Company of Charlotte, North Carolina using offset lithography. The press run was 6000, with a trim size of nine inches by twelve inches. Paper is Warrens Cameo Dull #80.

Body copy is Souvenir Light, in 11 point type with a 1 point leading. Captions are 9 point, and photo credits are 7 point. Headlines are 48 point and set in the following styles:

Student Life:	Friz Quadrata
Academics	Avant Garde Gothic Medium
Sports:	Tiffany Demi
Greeks:	Melior (30 point)
Organizations:	Century Schoolbook Italic
Records:	Americana

Subheads throughout the book are 24 point Century Schoolbook Italic.

TAPS utilized the Pantone Color Matching System for its spot color. The scoreboards in the sports section are Pantone 267-C; Divider pages are Pantone 195 (maroon) and 877 (silver); pp. 18-21: Pantone 508; pp. 34-41: tools-Pantone 877, Background: 412; pp. 69-71: Pantone 129; pp. 80-89: Pantone 485. Background for pages 180-189 is Pantone 172.

Masao Kinoshita was the TAPS Cover Contest winner. The design was embossed on Hollister Satin Wine and topstamped with BA2 silver foil.

All candid and organization photos were taken by staff photographers. The black-and-white photos were selected from over 15,000 35mm and 120mm frames of Ilford HP5, FP4 and Pan F films. All were processed by the photo staff and printed on Ilford Ilfospeed papers.

Color photographs were chosen from over 10,000 frames of 35 and 120mm Kodak Ektachrome 64, 200, and 400 film; also, from over 4,500 35 mm Kodachrome 25 and 64 films. Color separations were performed on a Hell 350 Laser Scanner.

Class portraits were photographed by Yearbook Associates of Millers Falls, Massachusetts.

TAPS is a member of the Columbia Scholastic Press Association.
